The Lindbergh Lesson.

Diphenyl Chlorosarsine.

What 500 Planes Could Do.

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

LINDBERGH FLEW THE OCEAN, sitting in a cockpit, unable to look ahead, except with the aid of a periscope, as men look from trenches, or a submarine.

That supplied a valuable idea to the army of Great Britain.

Ever since Lindbergh's flight British Royal air force engineers have been working, in secret, on what they call "the greatest lesson of Lindbergh's flight."

Amazed at Lindbergh's good physical condition, when he landed in Paris, thoughtful British engineers decided that it was due largely to the enclosed cockpit protecting him from cold, engine noise, to a great extent, and fumes from the engine.

They have produced, keeping secret its details, a fighting plane with a cockpit protected by armor, in which the pilot will sit and fight, entirely enclosed, or drop explosives or gas, safer than any fighting pilot has ever been.

Three Swedish fliers will soon start for this country, coming west via Greenland. Swedes, always pioneers, are excellent fliers, and they will be welcome.

Imagine their incredulity had some one told them "before many years Swedes will fly across this ocean."

The Texas fliers are finishing their eighth day of continuous flight. At dusk tonight, if still in the air, they will have eclipsed the Question Mark's record and hold the world's championship.

Such flights "against time" are extremely important, testing the endurances of engines and pilots and preparing for the round-the-world air trips soon to come.

He went up 21,500 feet, carrying half a ton.

Today two planes may start together in a race across the Atlantic. One plane starts for Rome, one for Paris. Such is the day's flying news.

More important to this country is the announcement by British army authorities that gas masks, sole defense against poisonous gases, will be worthless in the next war.

A safe place would be the inside of a submarine, 100 feet under water, except that a depth bomb could reach that.

The nations, according to the same authority, are secretly manufacturing gases far more deadly than any yet known. That seems hardly necessary, after you read of one new gas known to all called diphenyl chloroarsine, interestingly described by Stuart Chase of the New Republic.

In a recent theoretical air attack, 75 planes from an imaginary "northern enemy" bombed London with 75 other planes and unlimited anti-aircraft guns defending the city.

The attacking planes broke through, with ease, not one being theoretically or otherwise checked. Each dropped 4000 pounds of bombs.

Chase writes: "Had these 22 tons of bombs been filled with diphenyl chloroarsine half the population of London, men, women and children would have been wiped out. All known methods of defense were helpless before 75 planes.

Not a single attacking plane was downed. Imagine what might be done with 500 planes (instead of 75), a force that every one of the leading nations can readily mobilize.

Europe's laboratories have prepared bombs "filled with deadly plague bacilli, or with anthrax for the extermination of milk cows and horses."

The new explosive, "radium atomite," more powerful than TNT, is interesting. But the main thing is the number of planes. In this country, where nobody in authority seems to worry, a well-planned attack would wipe out New York, Chicago and Washington in a couple of hours. And millions of unprotected Americans would pay, with their lives, for official indifference and lack of imagination.

Diphenyl chloroarsine, you must know, makes gas masks useless.

Can anything be done? Certainly. The richest country in the world might have such powers of attack as would mean swift destruction for any nation foolish enough to attack the United States.

Gov. Allen Signs Boston School Bill

THIRD BABY KIDNAPED IS FOUND IN ROXBURY

ALLEN OK'S HUBSCHOOL MEASURE

Governor Allen today signed the bill reorganizing the Boston schoolhouse commission, subject to a referendum to the voters of Boston at the election this fall.

The measure abolishes the present paid commission appointed by the mayor and substitutes an unpaid commission of three.

Under the revised form the mayor would appoint one member, exempt from civil service approval; the school committee would name a second, and these two would choose a third. If they do not agree on a choice within 30 days the third would be appointed by the Governor.

Serving under this commission would be a superintendent of construction at a salary of not more than $12,000 a year. He would have authority to appoint one or more deputies, one of whom would have charge of repairs and alterations of all school buildings, subject to direction of the superintendent.

All employes of the present commission subject to civil service would be reappointed without re-examination.

The act provides for a series of checks on the activities of the superintendent of construction. All proposed budgets for construction, land-takings and other expenditures would be submitted to the commission, which would then report in writing to the school committee, which would make or refuse the appropriation.

'SALLIE' CHIEF BADLY HURT

New York, May 25 (AP)—Evangeline Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army in America, was seriously injured in an automobile accident yesterday, it was announced at her headquarters today.

Commander Booth is suffering from concussion of the brain and a multiple contusion, around the eye.

"She is progressing as favorably as can be expected, and there is no immediate cause for alarm," the announcement read.

The accident occurred when the commander was on her way from her home in Harisdale to the headquarters here. An engagement in Cleveland Sunday has been cancelled.

TRAINS HELD UP BY NITRE GAS

The deadly fumes of nitrous oxide escaping from a broken pipe line in the Merrimac Chemical Company plant at Broadway and Chemical lane, Everett, endangered the lives of hundreds of persons today.

Because of danger from the black smoke-like fumes, which caused a general belief that a big fire was under way, several trains of the Boston & Maine Railroad were flagged and prevented from passing the plant until the broken pipe had been repaired by a squad of 50 men in gas masks, including many Everett firemen.

HARVARD 'WHOOPEE' EXPENSIVE

New York, May 25 (AP)—College boys who come to make whoopee in New York's night clubs had best have enough money to pay their check when "Home, Sweet Home" is played.

J. Howard Smith of Harvard didn't, and he appealed to West Side court today to get rid of charges of assault against Philip Marino, manager of a Broadway club.

Smith, 22, of Randolph Hall, Cambridge, said he was taken into a room by three men and beaten when he and four companions, three of them fellow-students at Harvard, had only $16 among them to meet a $25 bill in Marino's club.

Smith's face was badly bruised and he said his brother, Paul, who also was beaten, was too disabled to appear in court.

The charges against Marino were dismissed when it was established he took no part in the beating.

At the registrar's office at Harvard University it was stated there was no J. Howard Smith enrolled at Harvard.

RED SOX SEEK DOUBLE WIN

Fenway Park May 25—The surprising Red Sox, with the first game of the twin bill safely tucked away, went out to make it two straight over the world's champion Yankees before 15,000 fans here this afternoon.

The Carrigan lineup banged out 12 hits off Heimach, Thomas and Moore to win the opening by the score of 10 to 8. The Yanks found Jack Russell for the same number of hits, including home runs by Gehrig and Dickey, but Billy Bayne, diminutive southpaw, took over the hurling duties for the natives in the sixth and the enemy's attack stopped at once.

Not a Yank reached first during the first four innings Bayne was on the firing line, and Gehrig and Ruth struck out in order in the seventh, much to the delight of the big gathering.

LEARY LAYS COP DEATH TO TEST

Following an autopsy on the body of Police Sergt. John F. Montague today, Dr. Timothy J. Leary, medical examiner, virtually said that the strength test, which formed part of the civil service examination for promotion, was sufficient to have caused death.

Moreover, one of the three civil service commissioners, George H. Harlow, denounced the test today as being too severe, while physical culture experts unanimously decrying it, declared it to be "criminal and unjust."

Medical Examiner Leary made this report:

"Death was caused by pulmonary embolism. A number of small bloodclots in veins of the right leg worked their way up into the pulmonary artery that leads to the lungs.

"I do not wish to go into further detail. I think the rest of what I have to say ought to go into my official report."

But he was then asked a hypothetical question as to what effect a severe test of strength, such as Montague underwent, would have on a man of his age and physical condition.

In reply to this question Dr. Leary said:

"Such exercise would probably be adequate to loose such clots, if they were present."

In connection with the question the medical examiner was informed that the test consisted in part of

Senate Must Deal With Big Questions in Open Sessions

The Senate barred the representatives of the press from the Senate chamber and deprived them of press privileges because the record of the vote by the various Senators on the confirmation of Lenroot had been made public by the newspapers.

Apparently the Senate is ashamed of the fact that while it was conducting an alleged investigation of the Power Trust it voted in secret session to confirm the appointment of a Power Trust lobbyist to an important judicial position.

It is very much to the discredit of the Senate that it should have confirmed the appointment of ex-Senator Lenroot, ex-Power Trust lobbyist, but it is SOMETHING TO THE CREDIT of the Senate that it should be ashamed of its vote and regretful that the humiliating record of the vote should have been made public.

As a matter of plain fact, however, the Senate should not have the right to go into secret session and to hide its acts, creditable or discreditable, from the knowledge of the American public—except possibly in matters of foreign relations, where a certain secrecy in regard to our international policies might conceivably be desirable.

But in domestic matters there is no excuse whatever for senatorial secrecy, except the unwillingness of the Senate to have the American public know what Senators are responsible for an unpopular or unworthy senatorial performance.

In the matter of the Power Trust, the Senate is debating daily the various acts of the trust in hiring school teachers, college professors, editorial writers and legislators, and in seeking to purchase a large proportion of the press of the country to distribute its propaganda and further its plans.

THE SENATE IS NOT MAKING THESE DEBATES IN SECRET. It is conducting them very publicly and making very public its professions of devotion to the popular welfare and its noble and patriotic desire to preserve the free press of the coun-

ANOTHER "DEATH TEST" COP IS STRICKEN

Patrolman Harry Brown, 37, of Station 13, who recently took the civil service physical examination, collapsed today on traffic duty in Center st., Jamaica Plain. At Faulkner hospital his name is on the danger list with a heart affliction.

CLOTHES OF 'UNKNOWN' TAKEN OFF

The third baby to be kidnaped within a month, divested of clothing and then abandoned was found crying in Townsend st., Roxbury, today.

A few minutes later the child, a girl of about three years of age, was in City Hospital, while police sought to establish her identity. An intensive search was begun throughout Greater Boston for the person, believed demented, apparently responsible in each instance.

In each instance the abduction has occurred on alternate Saturdays and in each instance Roxbury has been the scene; these facts, according to police, point conclusively to one person being responsible for all three abductions.

A six-year-old girl whose name she did not know ran gthe doorbell at the Mrs. Henry Solomon's home, 44 Townsend st., Roxbury, this afternoon and informed Mrs. Solomon that an unclothed baby was crying in a cart outside her home.

DEATH SPLITS CIVIL SERVICE BOARD ON HARROWING TESTS

'CZAR-LIKE' TACTICS SCORED

lifting 320 pounds with the back, also a 75-pound dumbbell, and jumping three feet in the air.

SPLITS TEST BOARD.

Associate Civil Service Commissioner Harlow caused a surprise by joining the ranks of the ever-increasing number who are denouncing the test as being too severe for men seeking promotions to police lieutenancies.

"I don't want to be drawn into any controversy with my colleagues," he said, "but I am against physical examinations for promotion and am so recorded. When the matter came up I protested and voted against it, but Chairman Elliot H. Goodwin and Commissioner McMahon outvoted me.

"It is my contention that as we give policemen and firemen a stiff physical examination when they enter the service, we should not subject them to another one when they are looking for a promotion to an easier position.

"Our first examinations are very hard and only a man who is physically perfect may pass it. I do not see why we should give a man another physical test after he has faithfully served ten, fifteen or twenty years and deserves promotion.

"However, as I said before, I do not care to enter any controversy with my associates. I like Mr. Goodwin very much, and think him one of the best men I have ever served with. He may be a bit theoretical, but he is straight just the same."

The opinion is not shared by Capt. Herbert W. Goodwin, the dead sergeant's immediate superior, who will demand an autopsy to fix the blame, and by State Senator Joseph J. Mulhern of Dorchester, who filed a bill demanding investigation of the commission.

Capt. Goodwin declared flatly he believed the sergeant died from a broken blood vessel caused by the strength test which is one of the Civil Service Commission, known as "The Bunion Board," because of its recent rulings, whereby requires of men seeking promotion to lieutenancies."

SCORES GOODWIN.

He said he would demand that Medical Examiner Timothy J. Leary fix the death blame, placing it formally at the door of the Civil Service Commission should facts warrant such a report.

Sergt. Maurice Sullivan of the Hanover st. station is patient at the City Hospital, suffering from injuries that resulted from his undergoing the tests for promotion.

In the meantime, the Legislature has before it Senator Mulhern's bill, in filing which he assailed Chairman Goodwin of the commission as "utterly unfitted for his position." He said Goodwin was acting like a "czar" in his office.

The Senator said Sergt. Montague took a re-examination after he had previously taken one in which he had been pronounced perfect, and while eating breakfast dropped dead.

"Dr. Bailey, who was called when Sergt. Montague collapsed," he said, "expressed the belief that he had died of a ruptured blood vessel. Such a result of a rigid physical test given a man around 50 years of age is to be expected. Anyone who expects a person of that age to lift heavy dumbbells, go through dips and all the other crazy contortions prescribed must be a fool. It isn't within the scope of nature. Furthermore, the position of police lieutenant or captain is an administrative office. The public expects these men to be experienced police workers, not rough and tumble gymnasts."

Senator Mulhern's opinion regarding strenuous physical tests was supported by physical culture experts.

John J. Sinnett, physical director of the Huntington ave. branch of the Y. M. C. A., declared, regarding the physical test required of police officers of 50 years of age:

"To require men more than 50 to lift a weight of 220 pounds off the floor and to lift an object weighing 320 pounds with the hands pulling between the legs I regard as absolutely criminal unless a man is built up for such a test.

"So careful are we that all weights of more than 35 pounds are kept under lock and key."

L. A. Vanick, physical director of the Sidney-Hill gymnasium in the Statler Building:

"I will not criticize the Civil Service Commission but I will say that in my opinion it is dangerous to require any man over 50 years of age to lift weights of over 200 pounds. I would not allow any of my pupils to do it."

Dr. S. C. Andrews, physical director of the commission, declined to make any statement other than to say that the test was designed by the commission and given him to carry out. "I receive my orders and carry them out," he said.

BOARD TAKES TEST.

Associate Commissioner Patrick J. McMahon of Westfield said he is not convinced that the physical examination taken by Sergt. Montague was the cause of his death, but he intends to be at the State House Monday with the intention of going into the matter thoroughly.

OCEAN HOPS AGAIN HALTED BY WEATHER

By ARTHUR QUINN,
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., May 25—The American plane Green Flash, and probably the French plane Yellow Bird, will not start across the Atlantic before Monday.

Adverse weather reports from Dr. James G. Kimball, New York meteorologist, at noon, today prompted Capt. Lewis Yancey and Lieut. Roger Williams, of the Green Flash, to announce that plans of starting the flight tomorrow had been abandoned.

The weather reports indicated low clouds and poor visibility over much of the Atlantic course for at least 24 hours.

The French fliers are still maintaining silence as to their plans. They intend to make their confessions tonight and receive holy communion tomorrow.

More than 5000 persons came here this afternoon to witness short trial flights of both planes.

The takeoff of the Poles may be delayed several days, as they have many preparations to make.

SUNDAY GOLF IS FORBIDDEN IN PLAINVILLE

"God bless Sunday golfers," recently supplicated a prominent Unitarian divine attending a national gathering of clergy in Boston.

"God help Sunday golfers—they'll be arrested sure," says the selectmen of Plainville, the town adjoining North Attleboro.

The Plainville selectmen don't care what any clergyman or layman, either, thinks about Sunday golf. They have decided it isn't going to be played in that town.

Washing the family car, cutting the grass, or even washing the family dishes within sight or hearing of passersby may become an offense if the fight that is being waged between the selectmen and certain individuals and organizations goes much farther.

The story, briefly, is this. The Plainville selectmen favored Sunday baseball. The Grange and church opposed this and the town voted against Sunday ball.

Now the selectmen have discovered that golf, tennis and a multitude of other activities are illegal, although they have been carried on for years. So the selectmen are going to the mat with the foes of Sunday baseball.

3D ROXBURY BABY IS KIDNAPED slip, crying, in a three-wheled cart.

She immediately called the police and Patrolmen Fennell and Wachter of the Dudley st. division, took the child in an ambulance to City Hospital.

BABY UNHARMED

After a cursory examination, physicians declared the baby unharmed. Questioned as to her name she gave a lisping answer which sounded like "Elizabeth Kerr" but might have been almost anything else. She could not tell where she lived, nor what had happened to her. The hospital doctors held her for observation.

The first abduction occurred in Roxbury on April 20, when the 7-month-old baby daughter of Mrs. Mabel Selig was taken from her carriage in Crawford st. and abandoned hours later without clothing.

MOTHERS ALARMED.

Two weeks ago today Charles Ratzman, year-old child of Mrs. Jessie Ratzman of 53 Newcomb st., Roxbury, disappeared in his carriage and was found two hours later abandoned in a shanty on Harrison ave.

Since the first two abductions, mothers throughout the Roxbury district have been alarmed over the safety of their children. Today, as in his other cases, there was no clue left regarding the age or sex of the abductor, although police believe an adult responsible.

Cotton Named Under Secretary of State

Washington, May 25 (INS)—The nomination of Joseph P. Cotton, New York lawyer, to be Undersecretary of State, was sent to the Senate today by President Hoover. He also sent the nomination of Brig.-Gen. John J. Byrnes, New York National Guard, to hold the same rank in the army reserves.

$175,000 R. I. FIRE TAKES 700 JOBS

Providence, May 25—One fireman was overcome, 50 families fled to safety, and damage estimated at $175,000 was caused when fire of undetermined origin destroyed the shoe-lining cutting plant of the Phillips & Baker Rubber Co. here today, throwing 700 persons out of employment.

Three alarms were sounded for the blaze and dense clouds of acrid smoke hung over the section, while the smell of burning rubber was apparent in the downtown business districts.

By strenuous efforts the 24 fire companies succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames to the other eight buildings making up the plant of the rubber company, and leased from the Mason Box Company.

The blaze started in the rear of the one-story wooden building located on Westfield, Fuller and Sprague sts., and when the firemen arrived it was a mass of flames. Deputy Chief John H. Hall ordered a second alarm, and Chief Frank Ellsworth, responding, ordered a third.

Feeding on rubber stock to be used for the manufacture of sport shoes, the fire roared through the building, the flames shrouded in the greasy smoke which rolled out in great clouds, driving to the street occupants of houses in the neighborhood.

Boy 'Steals' His Dad's Plane for a Joy Ride to Town

South Bend, Ind., May 25 (INS)—In olden days the adventurous son of the family stole his father's buggy. Then it was the auto. Today he makes way with the family airplane.

R. S. Kessling, 15, of Pendleton, Ind., and his cousin, C. F. Harris, 20 of Anderson Ind., were detained here when Kessling, an unlicensed pilot, admitted the American Eagle biplane he landed at the municipal airport belonged to his father.

He is liable to a fine under Indiana law.

4 ESCAPE FROM AUTO IN RIVER

The Salem turnpike in Saugus was turned into a milky way, while four persons, including two women, were forced to swim out of the Saugus river, after an automobile crashed into a milk wagon today.

The four plunged into the river were spectators of the crash. They were so interested in the mishap that they forgot to pay attention to their own machine, which crashed through a railing and dropped into the stream.

The four were George Zeigler and Thomas Winn, sailors of the United States Navy, Mrs. Marie Winn and Catharine Hines, both of Malbon pl., Roxbury.

The wagon was driven by Armand J. Devereau, Stevens rd., Saugus. The driver of the machine that struck the wagon was Elmer V. Voss, Ocean ave., Lynn.

No one was injured.

PRESS REJECTS REED OFFER OF PARLEY

Washington, May 25 (INS)—The feud between Senator David A. Reed (R.) of Pennsylvania and the press gallery of Congress over Reed's reference to "this so-called ethics of the so-called profession" burst into the open this afternoon.

Reed's secretary first posted a notice in the Senate press gallery asking the newspapermen to confer with him later in the day on "executive session, newspaper ethics and to swap viewpoints."

Twenty members of the press gallery immediately signed a petition asking the standing committee of correspondents to inform Reed that he should make his announcement concerning "newspaper ethics on the floor of the Senate."

53 Senators Are Pledged to "Full Publicity"

Washington, May 25 (INS)—A liberalization of the Senate's rules, to provide for public consideration of presidential nominations and official publication of roll-calls, seemed assured today when an International News Service poll revealed at least 53 Senators pledged to "full publicity."

The poll showed the Senate would revise its rules and abandon the secrecy policy toward presidential appointments whenever the question comes to a vote. A number of Senators, in addition to the 53 favoring "full publicity," declared they would favor publicity under most conditions, but preferred to withhold a statement of their position until the proposed changes had been debated.

Three separate changes are pending, all based upon the theory of authorizing public sessions by a majority vote of the Senate. The existing rule requires a two-thirds vote before nominations or treaties can be discussed in public.

FAVOR FULL PUBLICITY.

ONLY 49 VOTES NEEDED

The 53 "pledges" constitute a clear majority of the Senate, as only 49 votes would be necessary to change the rules.

Interesting sidelight to the poll was that it showed the former editors, publishers and newspaper men in Senate overwhelmingly in favor of publicity. Senators Allen, Capper, Copeland, Couzens, Glass, Nye and Vandenberg, all newspapermen, favored publicity. Senators Moses, Edge and Tyson were reported "non-commital."

ASTRONOMER SERVISS DEAD

Englewood, N. J., May 25 (INS)—Garrett P. Serviss, author, philosopher and popular astronomer, died today in his 78th year at Englewood Hospital. His passing ended an illness of three weeks. At his bedside was his son, Edward Gatter.

Mr. Serviss had been residing in Englewood with his wife, Mrs. Huguette Serviss, and his two children, Mrs. Maecelle Musso and Edward Gatter.

More than any man of his time, perhaps, Garrett P. Serviss is credited with the popularization of science. His lucid, readable writings on science, notably on astronomy, have started countless boys and girls along paths of study. For many years his daily articles, brightened by his own mellow philosophy, have appeared daily in the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers throughout the country.

Public Should Know What Senate Does

try and the educational institutions of the country and the legislative bodies of the country from Power Trust pollution.

But when a Power Trust lobbyist comes up before the Senate for confirmation, THE SENATE GOES INTO SECRET SESSION, hides behind the smoke-screen of senatorial privilege, and confirms the appointment of the Power Trust lobbyist.

In other words, in relation to the Power Trust the Senators' PROFESSIONS are public and their ACTS are secret.

And the Senate so greatly objects to having the contrast between their patriotic PUBLIC professions and their discreditable SECRET acts brought before the attention of the people, that it penalizes the representatives of the public press and denies them henceforth, in very petty spite, the privilege of the Senate chamber.

The Senate will please realize, however, that the newspapers of the country are not as yet all bought up by the Power Trust; that there are numerous newspapers, among them the Hearst newspapers, which owe their allegiance to the citizenship of the nation, and which are not to be subsidized or suppressed by the Power Trust, and not to be intimidated by the Senate.

The Hearst papers made public the facts which led to the investigation of the Power Trust's subsidising of school teachers, college professors, editorial writers and legislators.

They then revealed the first fact of the nationwide attempt to buy up the public press and pollute the wellsprings of public information.

They then published the facts concerning the secret vote of the Senate in confirmation of a Power Trust lobbyist's appointment to an important judicial position.

If the Senate disapproves of all these acts on the part of the Hearst newspapers in giving all this vital information to the public, the Senate may rest assured that the public does not disapprove, and the Hearst newspapers are much more concerned with public approval than they are with senatorial approval.

Furthermore, it is much more important for the Senate to have the APPROVAL OF THE NEWSPAPERS than it is for the newspapers to have the APPROVAL OF THE SENATE; and the Senate can never have the unqualified approval of the newspapers while it publicly makes noble and patriotic professions and secretly performs acts which are at vital variance with those professions.

The first thing for the Senate to do is to free itself entirely from Power Trust influence.

The second thing for the Senate to do is to be sincere in its professions of loyalty to the public interest, and to deal honestly and courageously with the great questions before it which so seriously threaten the public interest, such as the corruption of schoolbooks, the subsidizing of college professors and editorial writers, and the attempt to control by purchase the free press of America.

Instead of putting Power Trust lobbyists in office, the obvious duty of Congress is to pass a law creating a federal commission to regulate the Power Trusts of the country, as railroads are now regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

And when the Senate does these decent things, it will not have to be ashamed of its acts, and will not have to go into executive session to conceal its acts, and will not have to expel the representatives of the press from the Senate floor for making its secret performances public.

Withal, the Hearst papers realize that the Senate is no more to blame for confirming Lenroot than the administration was for appointing him; and that even the mistakes which the Senate occasionally makes are of slight importance in comparison with the immense service which that historic body has rendered the people of the country on various crucial occasions; such, for instance, as when the Senate kept the United States out of the League of Nations in spite of the attempted coercion of the then President, and the powerful influence of the international bankers.

The Senate AS A RULE deserves the respect and admiration of the nation, and it should not weaken that respect by such antiquated procedure as secret sessions, or by such reactionary performances as confirming Power Trust lobbyists, or by such fatuous and futile acts as expelling from the Senate chamber the representatives of the public press for performing their public duty.

WRONG NUMBER SAVES 8 LIVES

New York, May 25 (AP)—A "wrong number" today saved a family of eight from death by gas poisoning.

William Banks was aroused at his Brooklyn home early today by the telephone ringing. Answering, he discovered the telephone girl had given the party at the other end the wrong number. He also discovered that the house was filled with gas. Mrs. Banks had forgotten to turn off a gas heater when the family went to bed and the flame had gone out.

Boy Scouts to Borrow U. S. Equipment

Washington, May 25 (AP)—The House has passed the Senate bill to authorize the Secretary of War to lend equipment to the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, for use at the Scouts' World Jamboree at Birkenhead, England, in July and August of this year. The measure now goes to the President.

FORD WANTS DRY LAW ENFORCED

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Henry Ford wants to see the prohibition laws enforced rather than modified.

That was the burden—as far as he let it be known afterward, at any rate—of his luncheon conversation with President Hoover at the White House.

"Prohibition is here to stay," he told newspaper men as he emerged from the White House. "Prohibition must be enforced. There can be no turning back. I do not believe the people of the country want modification."

HEAD OF POLICE HAS TO BREAK THE LAW

Police Superintendent Michael H. Crowley was no better off than thousands of other car owners today. He had to hunt a parking space and when he left his car he was technically liable to have it tagged.

The rear of police headquarters has 11 parking spaces, each plainly marked with the title of the official or branch of the department that may use it.

With Commissioner Wilson away his secretary, John Merrick, advanced his car from No. 3 space to No. 2. Another secretary, Timothy Manning, then put his in No. 3 space, which is marked "Superintendent." The third space, marked "Secretary," was filled by a dilapidated signal service machine with a ladder on the side, and the genial "super" was entirely out of the running, for all the other spaces were filled, too.

PARKER FIGHTS AUTO BRIDGE SMASHERS

Declaring that the smashing of bridge railings has reached the "epidemic" stage, Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker today stated he was prepared to take drastic action to put a stop to "this particular form of careless, foolhardy driving."

"Within a week there have been seven motor vehicle fatalities in this state due to skidding and crashing through the railings of bridges," the register commented. "Last night another operator, Mitchell Levy of 168 Hichborn st., Revere, driving fast and without due care, crashed through the railing of the Chelsea bridge at Mystic Wharf, Charlestown, falling away 20 feet of the wooden fence. The car dropped to the Boston & Maine yard below the bridge, Levy escaping death only by the narrowest of possible margins.

"In view of the present epidemic of railroading on bridges I have summoned the above-mentioned operator to the registry, where he will be given a hearing to show cause, if any, why his license to operate should not be suspended.

"To terminate this epidemic of crashes on bridges, where the circumstances seem to warrant it, appropriate action will be taken in our efforts to put a stop to this particular form of careless, fool-hardy driving."

TAXI STRIKE IS THREATENED

A strike of taxicab drivers is scheduled to take place in Chelsea before the end of the day unless the taxi owners accede to the demands of the drivers for a straight $4 per day salary.

There are 31 taxicab drivers employed by four companies, operating in Chelsea. These drivers receive 35 per cent of all the fares they receive.

One company, the Capital, has announced that it will meet the demand. The other companies declare they cannot afford to pay a straight $4 salary.

$100 TO CITY FOR CONSCIENCE FUND

It may have been the Santa Claus mentioned by Mayor Nichols in connection with the City Council baseball scandal, or it may not, but at any rate City Treasurer Frank L. Brier today received $100 for the "Conscience Fund" from "Santa Claus."

The contribution, in the form of a crisp $100 bill, was received in an envelope which had been registered and bore a Back Bay postoffice stamp under date of May 24. On a slip of paper was written: "For your conscience fund. Santa Claus."

This is the largest contribution to the fund since September 21 last, when a man wearing a brown derby hurried into the office, left $2000 in cash and hurried out, unwept, but not unsung or unhonored.

JUDGE PUTS 42 STRIKERS ON GOOD CONDUCT

Justice was tempered with mercy by Judge Zottoli in municipal court today when 42 striking shoe workers and sympathizers were found guilty of obstructing a foot passage.

The 42, including six women, were arrested at Harrison ave. and Broadway, after a wild demonstration in which the strikers sang Soviet songs and staged a demonstration against the shoe workers who have taken the places of the strikers.

Judge Zottoli, after finding the defendants guilty, told them he would reserve imposition of sentence for two weeks and that the sentence would depend upon the conduct of the defendants during the next fortnight. He then ordered the prisoners released on their own recognizance.

WOMEN CONFER WITH LAWYER ON PEACE

With a cement walk now covering the spot in Oakton ave., Dorchester, made famous by the valiant stand of Mrs. Mary Fitzpatrick, who refused to allow the telephone company to erect a pole in front of her property, a calm and peaceful week-end was assured.

Day and night, since last Monday, constant watch was kept by Mrs. Fitzpatrick and neighbors to prevent telephone workmen from putting up the last pole on the avenue. Now the contractor who is paving the street has reached a point beyond the Fitzpatrick house and, if the telephone company wishes to erect the pole it will be required to dig through six inches of cement.

A conference between residents of Oakton ave., their attorney and telephone officials, which was to have been held today, did not materialize. And so it looked as if the sentinels who guarded the post hole site all week were due to spend a sleepless week-end. But then the contractor, who is officially ignorant of any war, put in the cement sidewalk while the neighbors cheered.

The telephone company has submitted figures for laying conduits on the avenue, and this is regarded as virtual admission of defeat.

The war is not yet over, however, and on Monday Oakton ave. residents intend to bring up the heavy guns of the law to assure them of victory.

The bride was accompanied to the registry office by her father and mother. She wore a dainty costume of turquoise blue, with a hat to match.

As soon as the ceremony was over the wedding party slipped out the back entrance and drove off unnoticed, escaping a crowd, many of them picturesquely garbed men and women workers from nearby Covent Garden, who had gathered outside to see them.

The groom is the son of an Argentine cattle king.

NEW WIDE ANGLE MOVIES MAKE HIT IN N. Y.

New York, May 25 (INS)—A new invention, "the three-dimension movie," was the talk of the motion picture world today.

Motion pictures produced by this process were displayed last night at the Gramercy studio of the RCA Photophone, Inc. The invention gave the pictures perspective and a vision angle so wide that a screen 52 feet wide and 30 feet high was used.

Images were recorded at a range of five miles. The device gave depth, vision angle and range to the picture. Two dozen chorus girls and boys were shown dancing together, and their features were life size and almost as clear as in the closeup of a standard picture.

In other pictures faces of individuals could be picked out at a great distance. The facial expressions and reactions of a number of persons could be noted simultaneously.

Experts who viewed the demonstration were thrilled, and were outspoken in praise of the invention. They said the new system of photography would be especially valuable in making travel pictures.

The pictures were synchronized with sound by RCA photophone. The demonstration did not achieve perfection, but was good enough to draw enthusiastic commendation.

George K. Spoor, a veteran of pictures, with "Broncho Billy" Anderson, started the old Essanay Film Co., and John J. Berggren are the inventors of the device, which is known as the Spoor-Berggren special wide film system.

700-Mile Highway, No Speed Limit—Oh Boy!

Havana, May 25—American tourists will soon have a motoring paradise on this fair island. Imagine three days of motoring along a smooth road built like a railroad grade, spanning great tropical gorges, crossing vast savannahs covered with sugar cane, and cutting through precipitous mountain ranges.

And no speed limit!

That is the automobile prospect to be opened to tourists as soon as the Cuban central highway is completed.

It will run 700 miles along the backbone of the island from Pinar del Rio in western Cuba, through Havana to Santiago de Cuba in the picturesque mountain ranges of Oriente province.

Eleven thousand men, more than 7000 trucks and regiments of modern equipment, are rushing the highway to completion. It is already 50 per cent completed.

The highway will be reached from the United States by way of the spectacular Overseas Highway, which cuts 125 miles across the palm fringed Florida keys from Miami to Key West.

An eight-hour ferry ride from Key West to Havana will take the motorists to the new highway, which is scheduled for completion in 1930.

The Cuban government has allowed foreign cars free entry with three months' gratuity. The highway will be free of grade crossings, and at no point will have more than a five per cent grade.

WIN MERCY OF TRIAL JUDGE

LAWYER CLAIMS ARNOLD FIXED UP MARRIAGE

New York, May 25 (INS)—Ray H. Arnold's $500,000 love piracy suit against Charles Hahn, Jr., former attorney for his wife, Mrs. Bessie Stum Arnold, continued today to be a matter around which surging charges revolved.

Among the charges is one made by Hahn to the effect that Arnold "engineered" the marriage of the fair Stewart P. West to Mrs. Margaret Crenshaw West, whose name has figured prominently in the suit, and to whom Arnold describes as an old friend.

Hahn also accused Arnold's butler, Venanceo Alcala, with being unable to read or write. Alcala has signed an affidavit stating he witnessed love-making between Mrs. Arnold and Hahn by peering through a keyhole.

A third charge made by Hahn is that Arnold manipulated his wife's stock holdings with unfavorable results.

Seven suits aggregating $450,000 are pending against Arnold for recovery of these stock properties. Two of the suits were instituted by Mrs. Arnold, three by her brother, John S. Stum, and two by her father, John A. Stum.

Crown Snatcher Puts Hungry King to Rout

Simla, India, May 25 (AP)—The hurried departure of former King Amanullah from Afghanistan and his arrival in India was impelled by the defeat of the last of his troops constituting the garrison of Kelat in the Ghilzai region after heavy fighting with the forces of Habibullah Khan, who recently snatched the crown from Amanullah.

After the defeat of his troops, Amanullah fled by night to Khandahar and thence to Chaman, British India, where he arrived hungry and thirsty.

The party consists of Amanullah, his wife, Sourika; the queen mother; Mohammed Bey Tarzi, father of Souriya, and his family, and two brothers of Amanullah, including Inayatullah, who was Emir for a short time after Amanullah's abdication.

ECKENER PLANS NEW U. S. FLIGHT IN 3 WEEKS

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS

(Famous explorer, who will be a passenger on the Graf Zeppelin when it flies to Lakehurst next month, and who returned on the airship from France to Friedrichshafen yesterday.)

(Copyright, 1929, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., in United States, Canada, Mexico, South America, Great Britain and Ireland and Continental Europe, except Germany. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

Friedrichshafen, May 25—The Zeppelin hangar is a busy workshop.

One hour after the great dirigible entered its home hangar, the engineers were busy working on the motors used on the flight from Toulon to Friedrichshafen, preparing them for research to determine whether they show any signs of trouble similar to that which caused the other motors to break down on the flight which ended in France.

WILL PUBLISH RESULTS

Dr. Maybach said:

"The Zeppelin's damaged motors are due to reach our factory tonight. They will also undergo thorough tests. Before now opinions as to the cause of motor troubles have been based to some extent on guess work. A scientific analysis is now possible.

"Our laboratories are already exhaustively testing the effects of the vibrations and stresses set up by changes made on the engines. The laboratories will now begin an immediate examination of the Graf Zeppelin's damaged motors, and the results of these examinations will be made public.

START IN THREE WEEKS

Commander' Eckner today declared:

Only when the report from the Mayhach factory is available will it be possible to state the time when we will be ready to start our Atlantic flight. As soon as the cause of the motor trouble is discovered then we can tell when we will be able to go, depending always, of course, on the meteorological conditions.

"At this time it seems probable that we will install five new motors of the type used on the previous flight, in which case we may leave for America anywhere between two and three weeks from now."

Others here are more optimistic and consider that it will be possible to make the new start within 10 days.

Zepp to Give the Motors New Tryout

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
Universal Service Special Cable

Friedrichshafen, May 25—The date on which the Graf Zeppelin will start to America again will be fixed on Wednesday.

By that time, on Thursday at the latest, the experiments begun yesterday on the motors by the Maybach Company, to determine the cause of their recent breakdown, will be in such a stage as to permit Commander Eckener to announce the time of his departure—weather permitting. Dr. Eckener said yesterday:

"We are anxious to make the flight as soon as possible, but we must await the report from Maybach. It may be two weeks before we are able to get away."

Capt. Lehmann said the final test report should be in Dr. Eckener's hands by Wednesday or Thursday. He added:

"Then we'll be in a better position to know when we are going. The tests being conducted take three stages. First, the motor must be tested on the block. Second, they will be tested in the gondolas, with propellers attached. Third, they will be used in actual flight, so that the Graf will have a number of short test flights before a start may be made.

"We are hoping to have the motors tested fully by the middle of next week, and then we can expect something definite. It may be necessary to have five new motors, and on the other hand, we may be able to use the old ones. But everything will be perfect when we finally take off. Everything, otherwise, is good now."

Mrs. Pierce Eager for Second Zeppelin Trip

Friedrichshafen, May 25—I am writing this just before I leave for Paris—but I will be back in this quaint little town when the Graf starts again.

It would take a good-sized army to keep me from going on the transatlantic flight. After the dreamlike moonlight trip I had, I want to see miles and miles of water beneath me as I sail over the glistening sea.

My greatest ambition now is to ride in a free balloon and be tossed about in the breeze.

That gallant Frenchman, Capt. Grillot, who came with us to Friedrichshafen on the Graf, and who is one of France's most expert balloonists, says he is willing to go up in a free balloon some day. And he's going to get the chance.

After I leave Paris I am going to London to consult the woman soothsayer who predicted to Sir Hubert Wilkins that the Graf would have motor trouble and not reach Lakehurst. She has aroused my curiosity.

HER OARSMEN TOOK WASHINGTON ACROSS THE DELAWARE

By PAUL WHELTON

As in the case of most New England communities, Marblehead has a background rich in history and tradition.

Nearly as old as the oldest, this seashore town, north of Boston, is noted for its almost unparalleled offshore part in the War of the Revolution and the War of 1812, for its ancient and picturesque old houses, and for the doughty crew of fishermen who rowed Washington across the Delaware.

For nearly three centuries, Marblehead has been a fertile field for writers who sing its charm and quaintness and a setting rugged and picturesque.

Few who know Marblehead only in its present dress—that of a calm and pleasurable peninsula town to which in Summer flock thousands of vacationists, including fleets of yachtsmen, are aware that once it was the leading "cod fish village" in America and was also infested with pirates.

Nor do many know that one of the most valuable paintings touching on America's history—the original painting of "The Spirit of '76," is in Marblehead, in Abbot Hall.

The large canvas, with life-size figures, is the work of A. M. Willard of Cincinnati and was bought for $5000, a copyright "song," in 1876 by Col. John H. Devereaux and presented to the town.

GAS TAX BORN HERE

It the head of this quaint town—or as the town calls the governing board—is Joseph Martin, chairman of the selectmen, a native of Marblehead, State representative for four years and author of the gasoline tax. He has two sons, Percy L. Martin, who is in the insurance business, and Edwin T. Martin, teacher in a California college.

The harbor master, an important post in Marblehead, where there are many fashionable yacht clubs, and the harbor is jammed in summer with craft, both cruising for pleasure and racing, is Paul Brackett. He has held that post for two years and is a member of the Corinthian Yacht Club.

P. Irving Chapman, still a comparative youth as men who hold his type of job are compared, is chief of police. He was appointed five years ago after 19 years of service in the department.

The police chief indicates with pride the record of Marblehead, which has enrolled a serious crime committed within its boundaries, despite the great wealth carried into the town each summer.

There are but 11 regular policemen, with 12 reserve men who are "full time" in the warm months. These men have 65 miles of roads to cover, many summer homes to guard the year round, and the harbor to patrol.

An outstanding citizen of the town is Dr. Philip B. Laskey, Harvard '71, a practicing dentist for 53 years, an inventor of sewing machines and dental instruments and originator of the Alemite system 30 years ago.

DAD AND SON SOLONS

When only 17 years old he enlisted with the 32d Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment, served two years and 10 months in the Civil War as a sergeant, was taken prisoner and held at Mechanicsville, Va., was paroled, resumed fighting, was wounded—and was on crutches in Marblehead at the time of Lee's surrender. The doctor is a member of the G. A. R. and is 84 years old.

Another prominent doctor of the town is Dr. Samuel P. Eveleth, member of the school committee, a lieutenant during the World War and a trustee of the Mary Alley Hospital.

Dr. Eveleth was born in Marblehead, was graduated from Amherst in 1904 and from Harvard Medical School in 1908. He is an ardent football fan.

Malcolm L. Bell, like his father, the Rev. Linton Bell, is a member of the General Court from Marblehead. He has three children, Linton, Lorette and Robert, and is 38 years old.

Some of the oldest houses in the town include the Lee mansion at Washington and Mason sts., built in 1768 and occupied by Col. Jeremiah Lee, a wealthy merchant. Its materials were brought from England.

There is the home of another wealthy merchant prior to the Revolution, that of "King Hooper." In Hooper st., occupied by Hon. Robert Hooper and used by him principally to give princely entertainment to men of social and political distinction. During the war it was used by Gen. Gage as his British headquarters for a period.

In Summer st., near Washington, is the most ancient and historic church of Marblehead, St. Michael's Episcopal Church, built in 1714, also of materials brought from England and much of which remains intact.

300TH BIRTHDAY SOON

During the last week in August, continuing to Labor Day, Marblehead will celebrate its 300th anniversary in a large way. The town has appropriated $17,000 for the observation in general and $7500 alone for a big parade under direction of the Massachusetts Department of the American Legion. For the anniversary, the U. S. cruiser Marblehead will be present in Marblehead Harbor and the crew will be presented with a silver service. Marblehead should be a good gathering, if that is possible, during celebration week.

On Monday a visit to Lynn will be described by the artist and reporter.

TUNNEY'S BALM PARLEY BARED BY LAWYER

Hot Springs, Ark., May 25 (AP)—Negotiations between Gene Tunney and Mrs. Katherine Fogarty which threatened Tunney's second fight with Jack Dempsey, have been brought to light by the mayor of Hot Springs.

Mayor Leo P. McLaughlin was city attorney of Hot Springs and a practicing lawyer when Tunney trained here several years ago. He said Tunney retained him as his representative at a conference with Mrs. Fogarty and Billy Gibson, the champion's manager, in April, 1927. An unsuccessful attempt was made at the conference to placate the woman and arrange a settlement with her, McLaughlin said.

Mrs. Fogarty was adamant, the Mayor declared, and said she would not accept less than $100,000. She said she still loved Tunney and was willing to marry him, and "she told us at that time that she had turned over letters and photographs which she said she had, involving Tunney, to her attorneys in the East," McLaughlin related.

Gibson told her that Gene did not have that sum and he would not enter the ring again unless an agreement was reached, lucky for he did not wish to risk having his money tied up, the Mayor said.

McLaughlin said Gibson left after negotiations extending over several days, saying that unless a satisfactory settlement was made with Mrs. Fogarty, Tunney and Dempsey would not fight in Chicago.

McLaughlin said he heard later that a settlement was reached. While representing Tunney at the conference here he talked to the fighter by long distance several times, he said, and Tunney expressed disappointment over the failure to settle the matter then.

Mayor McLaughlin said he had dismissed the incidents from his mind until a recent visit of John S. Fogarty, the woman's former husband, to Hot Springs. Fogarty told him, McLaughlin said, he planned to sue Tunney for $500,000 for alienation of his wife's affections.

BARGAIN SALE IN FURNITURE

The Warehouse Furniture Outlet, Inc., offering high-grade new furniture at warehouse prices, opened to the public this week in its warehouse at 1010 Massachusetts ave., midway between Edward Everett sq. and Northampton st. The warehouse will be open this evening until 9 o'clock.

The concern introduces itself as operator of New England's largest warehouse selling household furniture direct to consumer at warehouse prices. The concern purchases furniture in carload lots at Grand Rapids, Jamestown and other nationally-known furniture markets. The carload lots are delivered direct from these factories by use of a spur track of the New Haven road.

With unnecessary handling thus eliminated, the furniture is now loaded and placed on sale in the spacious warehouse, which has 6½ acres, almost 300,000 square feet, of floor space. The firm states this process eliminates the cost of trucking the furniture through the city's congested streets and cutting out jobbers' and middlemen's profits.

The warehouse is without expensive display fixtures, has no display windows, no expensive service, no high-salaried salesmen, nor expensive lighting fixtures. The corporation is located in its own plant, easily reached from the heart of the city by automobile or on the Boston Elevated lines.

There is plenty of parking space, handy to the warehouse, for automobiles of visiting patrons.

NEW JEFFERSON SOCIETY RAPS POWER TRUST

Worcester, May 25—The Jefferson Society of Massachusetts, an organization composed of liberals affiliated with the Democratic party, and numbering among its members such prominent persons as Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, daughter of Woodrow Wilson, Ray Stannard Baker, William G. Thompson and LaRue Brown, was organized at a meeting being held at the Hotel Bancroft today.

LaRue Brown, presiding at the opening session, attacked the efforts of the power interests to control the press and served notice on the Democratic leaders of the state that the liberals in the party hold the balance of power at the polls, and that the views of the liberals must be respected.

FLAYS POWER "GRAB"

Brown declared that it was not the intention of the liberal organization to dictate to the Democratic party but he asserted the right of members to support candidacies of such type as would appeal to independent voters.

"It has long been no secret that important channels of public information have been poisoned at their source," Mr. Brown declared in attacking the power trust control of newspapers. "Lately we have been told something of the method by which it is done. We hope to find the means to bring home to the electorate the truth which shall make them free."

There was a veiled threat in Brown's discussion of the "balance of power" which he declared the liberals of the state held.

He said the liberal vote of the state "won this state for Governor Smith. Without the approval of those voters no Democratic candidate can carry Massachusetts. With that support everything is possible. It is our right and it may become our duty to give the weight of our support to such candidates (as follow our policies) and such alone."

LEADERS AMONG RANKS

William C. Thompson, in an address at a noon luncheon, flayed the Republican party as "the instrument used to impose upon the mass of the population the ideals of plutocracy and to create and perpetuate the opportunity for their realization."

He declared that the Thomas Jefferson Society had allied itself with the Democratic party "prepared, so far as concerns the means for attaining our end."

Among charter members of the society are: Prof. Samuel Allen, Ray Stannard Baker, Mr. and Mrs. LaRue Brown, George D. Bunce, Miss Sarah Cabot, Professor and Mrs. Zechariah Chafee, Charles F. Campbell, Dr. Hilbert F. Day, Prof. Clarence Dewey, Lawrence Dodge, Joseph B. Ely, John T. Fisher, Robert Fletcher and Mrs. Francis G. Goodale, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hower.

PUBLIC MAY GET A SAY IN FATE OF ELEVATED

With the extension of public control apparently eliminated, renewal of the battle over the El's future in the House on Monday will center on a referendum to the people of the cities and towns served by the road.

Advocates of the Wadsworth bill which provides for the serving of notice to the Elevated of termination of public control in 1932 claim they have changed enough votes to ensure reconsideration of the rejection of the public control extension bill, and to bring about the substitution of the return to private ownership measure.

Rep. James J. Twohig of South Boston, leader of the public ownership group, in a statement issued today, declared he was ready to support the Wadsworth bill, provided two amendments which he will offer are accepted.

The first of these is a clarifying move. It would make sure that the state's right to exercise its option to purchase at any time after the notice is given is retained by the people.

The second amendment provides that, upon the passage of the Wadsworth bill, the voters of the district shall vote, at the regular State election in 1930, on these two questions:

1—Shall the railway system of the Boston Elevated Railway Co. be returned to its private owners for management and operation?

2—Shall a district, to comprise the cities of Boston, Cambridge, Somerville, Medford, Malden, Everett, Chelsea, Revere and Newton, and the towns of Arlington Brookline, Watertown and Belmont, purchase, manage and operate the railway system of the Boston Elevated Railway Co.?

Hoover's 'Home Folks' in Capital Society

By SALLIE V. H. PICKETT

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Washington's passing show is at its most interesting stage just now and there is an informal intimacy about everything social that goes on.

Even at the White House, where things are usually carried on with a great degree of ceremony, an informal touch is noticed and it is no longer the thing for the President and the first lady of the land to rise with a somewhat bored look as a signal for guests to take their departure.

The President and Mrs. Hoover forego many of the usual customs when entertaining guests and carry on just as they would do in their private home. Indeed, one society woman of Washington professed to be greatly shocked as the President stepped back to permit Mrs. Hoover to precede him in leaving a room.

The President may have curtailed handshaking, but Mrs. Hoover has not, and while more formal teas at which she received diplomatic and officials are over she still meets groups of guests and many tarry on in Washington in hope of being asked in.

42 PLANES TO DROP BOMBS IN WAR GAME

Wright Field, Dayton, O., May 25 (AP)—With all a flurry of activity climaxed by a real demonstration of the destruction that can be wrought by army aircraft, the United States Army war maneuvers drew toward the close today.

For 10 days bombers, attack planes and pursuit ships of the Red and Blue states, aided by ground troops, have fought each other in a mimic war that drew near its end with the threatened capture of Columbus, capital of the Red state by the superior Blue army.

Until today the opposing armies have been fighting each other by skill only—and all for the practice it afforded. Bombs and ammunition were only imaginary.

But today at 3 p. m. was scheduled a demonstration, in which 99 of the 200 planes concentrated in Ohio were assigned to take part—an attack with real bombs and ammunition upon canvas-covered frames representing transport wagons and 1000 man-sized cardboard targets representing soldiers.

Philadelphia, May 25—A request "unparalleled in church history" on the part of Dr. Samuel S. Drury, rector of St. Paul's school, Concord, N. H., is the underlying cause of his rejection of the call of bishop coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pennsylvania, according to Bishop Thomas J. Garland.

Dr. Drury has now taken his place beside four others who refused the post, including Dr. Henry Knox Sherill, rector of Trinity Church, Boston.

Bishop Garland said Dr. Drury had told the notification committee that before he could consider the offer, the bishop would have to indicate when he intended to retire and allow the coadjutor to take over full control of the diocese.

Calling this request on the part of Dr. Drury "unparalleled in church history," Bishop Garland said he had refused to state to Dr. Drury when he would retire.

Under the laws of the church the bishop coadjutor would have the right of succession to the office of bishop when the latter retires or dies. The committee in charge may seek a way out of the difficulty by electing a local clergyman who would be likely to accept, or by choosing a bishop suffragan, who would not have the right of succession.

GERMANY PUTS YOUNG PLAN UP TO ALLIES

Berlin, May 25 (INS)—The German Government today notified Dr. Hjalmar Schacht that it stands behind the German reparation declaration in accepting the Young plan and in rejecting the proposals that exceed that plan.

The last German reparation hopes are pinned upon Owen D. Young, the American chairman of the international committee of experts, who, it is declared here, "stands behind the German delegates."

The remaining difference between the two sets of figures is only 78,000,000 marks annually, but in spite of the smallness of this sum pessimism was prevalent here. A decision is expected before night. If a final agreement is found impossible a political conference is expected to follow.

SAYS EMPLOYERS THREATEN VOTERS

Crewe, Cheshire, Eng., May 25 (AP)—Charges that employers have told those working for them they will lose their jobs if they vote for Labor Parliamentary candidates in the British general election May 30 were made by former Premier Ramsay MacDonald in an election address here.

He expressed a desire for an act of Parliament forcing political parties to disclose sources of their funds, charging that favors were granted industries in return for contributions to campaign chests.

New York, May 25 (INS)—Miss Alice Morrow, aunt of Col. Charles Lindbergh's fiancee, arrives here today on the United States liner America to attend the famous flier's wedding. Miss Morrow has been in Europe for a year.

BABSON LIGHT TALK CALLED NONSENSE

Characterising as "nonsense" an offer made by Roger Babson of Wellesley, noted economist, to the taxpayers of Concord with regard to their municipal plant, Sol. Robert E. Goodwin, chairman of the special committee on the Concord lighting problem, made public a challenging letter which he had sent to Babson.

Col Goodwin, speaking at a community meeting of West Concord citizens, attacked Babson's offer to equal if not better the Boston Edison bid of $600,000 for the Concord plant.

Besides making this offer in behalf of the Boston, Worcester & New York Street Railway Company, pany, Babson had urged Concord citizens not to sell to anybody, advising them to continue to operate a community-owned plant.

Col. Goodwin charged that the street railway company could not buy a power plant under the law and could not sell power.

It has been announced that a new company was being formed to take over the power plant of the street railway company and to sell electric current under the same statutes as other power companies.

Ohio Experts Here in Power Probe Tour

An investigation of the operations of the power interests in Ohio will be made shortly by the public utilities commission of that state, whose members have just completed a two-day study of utility problems now confronting members of the Massachusetts commission.

Under the order of Governor Myer Y. Cooper of Ohio, the commission is now on an investigation tour of Eastern states, which will be followed by a trip westward, with the purpose of gaining all the information on the utility problems with a view to using it in the solution of similar conditions in Ohio.

While members of the Ohio body said the paramount utility problem in Ohio at present is telephone, they added that they intend to reach rock bottom in all utility situations, paying particular attention to power.

The Ohio commission is composed of Chairman Reece C. McCulloch, Judge Frank W. Greiger, Judge William S. Klinger and Executive Secretary Dr. E. E. Sprankle.

One of the members has admitted that power is due to be an engrossing problem in Ohio before long and that the Massachusetts commission is regarded as a "shock troop unit" in its battles against the power interests. "The rest of the country is looking to Massachusetts to lead the battle in the utilities fight," one of the commission stated at the State House.

"We are making this trip to study conditions and problems in many states," Executive Secretary Sprankle said, "and when we return to Columbus, we will immediately begin a thorough investigation of the public utilities of our state. If we find that the citizens of Ohio are being overcharged by any utility, be it power, traction or gas company, we will go to the combat and fight for reductions."

Plot to Weaken Lighting Bill Bared in the Senate

An attempt to amend the municipal lighting bill so as to make it less effective in the people's fight against extortionate rates demanded by private electric companies, is being attempted in the Senate ways and means committee, it was learned today.

Although the manipulations of the committee are being conducted with the closest secrecy, it is learned that Chairman Henry C. Attwill was called before that body to see if he would object to tacking them on.

Attwill, one of the leaders in the move to put the municipal bill on the statute books, is expected to stand by the bill as now it stands, which is a careful redraft of an original bill made by Chairman Henry L. Shattuck, chairman of the House ways and means committee.

Prior to the talk of amendments, Senator Clarence P. Kidder of Cambridge talked with President Gaspar G. Bacon of the Senate. Kidder is the chairman of the Senate ways and means committee.

The committee will hold another executive hearing on Monday, have Attwill's answer by that time, and will be hard pressed to find a further excuse for any additional delay.

Failing to get the bill weakened in committee, the next move, it is understood, will be for the friends of the big power combine to attempt to masculate it when it reaches the floor of the upper chamber.

Not a move in the bill's progress is escaping the watchful eye of the lobbyist for the private lighting group.

Power Plant's Earnings Jump $26,875 in Month

New Bedford, May 25—The day following Mayor Ashley's announcement that another reduction can be expected soon in the public light rates, the New Bedford Gas and Edison Light Co. announces it earnings for last month, show a net income of $26,875.72 above the earnings in April, 1928. Profits last month were $116,284.56; a year before they were $89,408.84.

Profits reported for the six months since the end of the strike total $713,504.61 or $117,553.61 more than the profit for the corresponding six months a year before, despite the fact that in five of these past six months bills have been sent out under the reduced rate schedule announced last October.

AID HOSPITAL'S DRIVE

Saving the babies is only one of the many details of a hospital. But money is needed to carry on.

One third of the $300,000 required for a new building has been subscribed to the Somerville Hospital fund, according to the executive committee. The staff of the hospital pledged $8000, nurses $2000 and the difference was subscribed by friends of the hospital. Photo shows Miss Dehlia Boyle, a nurse, with Rosemary Reardon, daughter of Mrs. Walter L. Reardon, a former nurse at the hospital.

POSSES IN HUNT FOR FIEND WHO SLEW GIRL, 6

Fort Bragg, Cal., May 25 (AP)—Search for the slayer of six-year-old Teresa Johnson, a schoolgirl, assumed wide proportions today as scores of vengeful townsmen joined a posse of deputy sheriffs in following a dim trail across the hills of this frontier district.

The girl's bruised body was found in a clearing near her home yesterday. The sheriff has advanced the opinion that the murder was committed by a resident of the section. He pointed out that no strangers had been reported in a community where every strange face usually excites comment.

Efforts to track the killer were hampered by cross trails made by possemen. The girl disappeared while on her way home from school. She had started home with another girl about her own age. The two girls parted at a road crossing south of Fort Bragg.

A physician said the girl had been attacked and strangled.

HIJACKERS LEAVE 30 CANS OF ALKY

Springfield, May 25—Two hijackers who had torn a hole in the side of a cement garage in William st., were surprised by a patrolman early today and escaped in an automobile, leaving behind them 150 gallons of alcohol now owned by the police.

The alcohol was stored in the garage in 59 five-gallon cans.

Eight of these had been removed through the aperture when Patrolman Robert Chapman, whose suspicions were aroused by a noise, flashed his searchlight on the operations.

Autoist Fined $10 for Using Old License

Alfredo Coporale of Hazel st., Watertown, is probably busy today having his automobile operator's license renewed.

Alfredo didn't know that he was required to renew his license yearly, but he paid $10 for this bit of valuable information. The fee was paid in the form of a fine in Waltham district court, where he was charged by the Watertown police with driving his truck with a license that had expired 15 months ago in his possession.

Prior to coming to the legislature, Rep. Chase was a member of the New Bedford City Council for two years.

BACK BAY IS STAGING OWN WESTWARD HO!

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

If it were not for the persistent artistic ardors of Mr. E. E. Clive and, perhaps, his deft persuasions upon the smart writing gentlemen across the sea, the local playgoer would have but scant opportunity of meeting the modern drama in its virgin state. Had we ever lifted, even hesitatingly, an inquiring eyebrow on the subject of Mr. Clive's general utility as a play-producer—and were we never tempted into such rash venture—the restless gentleman from upper Stuart st. appears to have settled the whole question himself. He has become Boston's only producer of new plays.

* * *

RATHER fetching, you might observe, or as Mr. Edgar Wallace, famed as Britain's long-distance dramatist, would put it, "Cheerio." For Mr. Wallace, generally speaking, plays the happy role of principal beneficiary. Mr. Wallace has done very well through the expeditions of Mr. Clive into the upper regions of the drama. Theatrical America now knows Wallace is a playwright, an industrious toiler in the arts, and, on the whole, something of a worthwhile personage. With the presentation of Wallace's "The Man Who Changed His Name" at the Copley, on Monday, Mr. Clive trickles into the fading hours of the season with a record of play production that urges attention. Since that sweltering Saturday, last August, when the machinery at the Copley was put into motion, exactly seven plays have been presented, five of which were given to the American stage for the first time.

Nicholas Young

* * *

THAT in itself is more than a decent record for any producing theater; for the Copley it becomes an achievement. For, to the show world at large, especially that section bounded by 42d st. and crosstown lanes farther north in the Broadway sector, these eastern shores are still held to be pitifully provincial. Mr. Clive, it appears, thinks differently. Just to give his new season, now gently cresting a fair stead, he was not content merely to give America his first glimpse of a new play; he gave one to the world. "The Bellamy Trial," it will be remembered, shows at the Copley for the first time on any stage. Therefore, it is to be expected that Wallace's "The Man Who Changed His Name" will stir local playgoer interest. Mr. Clive, upon his own choice, stays out of the cast, but he draws upon the broader field of the theater for a guest player, Ernest Glendinning. This should prove a happy choice for everybody concerned, especially the nervous author, Mr. Wallace, for his new comedy has surely fallen into good hands.

* * *

WHILE it might be slightly premature to add that the theater, like real estate, is moving uptown, there are unmistakable signs which reveal bold and extraordinary plans by the unified Public Theaters. An extension westward on Huntington ave. to under way. Mr. Clive, having done his bit toward pushing the legitimate drama into and around Copley Sq., may now embark upon his annual deep sea voyage to London with the comforting assurance that during his absence amusement matters uptown will be tenderly nursed. Public Theaters, having taken over the St. James, now propose pretentious plans for big things in the Back Bay. Moving upon the theory—and fact—that all great municipalities have their important "uptown" sections, that name will hereafter be given to the former St. James.

* * *

JUST for good measure, and because the theater moves in these ways, the new playhouse will be given over to six weeks of alteration and improvement. New furnishings will greet the eye; sound equipment will be installed. And, also, the Uptown will finally possess a modern refrigeration system to make things pleasant on days of oppressive heat and humidity. The Uptown will add another temple of cinema to a populous section of Boston. The responsibility for this bit of pioneering in developing an uptown Boston on an expansive scale will fall upon the broad shoulders of Harry Browning, long known as an apostle of efficiency in the quick sale of good pictures. Mr. Browning has been through the mill; he has labored but friendly hands upon theaters suffering from anaemia and made them red-blooded playhouses of great value. In any event the new Uptown will have the benefit of proficient direction.

"BROADWAY MELODY"

"The Broadway Melody" in its first week topped all records of the New Empire, London, by 80 per cent, states a cablegram received by the M-G-M home office from Sam Eckman, general manager for the company in England. The picture built considerably the first three days of its second week.

The New Plays

COPLEY—"The Man Who Changed His Name," a comedy by Edgar Wallace. First time in the United States. In the cast are Ernest Glendinning, guest player for the engagement; Gaby Fay, Gerald Rogers, Ian Emery, David Clyde and Hannem Clark. Staged by E. E. Clive.

PLYMOUTH—Jane Cowl in "Jenny," a modern comedy by Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes. Deals with the excitements and extravagances of American society. In the supporting cast are Guy Standing, Katherine Emmet, Joyce Carey, Robert Lowe, Ben Lackland Maren Evenson, Hale Norcross and Lewis Martin. Staged by Miss Cowl and W. E. Watts. Produced by Brady and Wiman.

BEAST KNOWS HIS ONIONS

Ted Browning, screen director, had to hire a brass band to help move the most temperamental screen actors he has ever handled into Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio for their roles in Lon Chaney's new picture, "Where East Is East," synchronized screen attraction at Loew's State the coming week.

Browning rented a herd of elephants and a dozen cages of tigers, leopards and other animals from a circus. They were shipped to the railway station at Palma, near the studio. There they found Lon Chaney hitched to the wagons in place of horses.

When the elephants arrived they balked and wouldn't walk a foot. Finally, circus men explained the stubbornness. The big animals were used to seeing horses draw the cages to parades and they always heard a band when they walked the streets. They couldn't understand what they were supposed to do without those usual accompaniments.

So Browning hired horses and a band, and the pachyderms paraded blithely down the street to the studios.

Lupe Velez, Estelle Taylor and Lloyd Hughes support Chaney in his newest picture.

First Screen Role Was to Advertise Sugar

May McAvoy, who is starring in the talking film, "No Defense," now making its first Boston showing at the Scollay, was born in New York city. Her ambition was to become a school teacher.

Meantime, glowing accounts had reached her of a vacation where youth and beauty and talent seemed to find more opportunities than before on the boards of a classroom. A girl chum of hers had obtained an engagement in motion pictures, and her zealous reports of the rewards to be found there fired May with an ambition to "go and do likewise."

Through letters of introduction she made the acquaintance of a director of a studio, who gave her a part in a picture advertising a brand of sugar. Her first important part was in "A Perfect Lady."

Stage Lure Defeated Annapolis Plans

Mitchell Lewis, one of the oldest character men in point of service in motion pictures today, who has appeared in motion pictures since their inception and is known to every civilized country, has an important role in "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sound and talking version of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize novel of 1928, the picture at Loew's Orpheum the coming week.

Lewis is the son of an opera singer who was determined that his son should never stand behind the footlights of a theater. After his graduation from Syracuse, his father secured him an appointment to Annapolis, when he was dismayed to find the boy's name in the cast of a New York stage play.

Still in the Ring

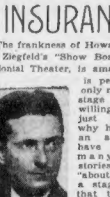
"Show Boat" at the Colonial. (Fourth week.) When better shows are made probably Ziegfeld will make 'em. But how?

* * *

"Blossom Time" at the Apollo. (Third week.) Appears to be doing very well. The Messrs. Shubert have extended the engagement two weeks.

HE ONCE SOLD INSURANCE

The frankness of Howard Marsh, in Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" at the Colonial Theater, is amazing. He is perhaps the only man on the stage who is willing to tell just how and why he became an actor. "I have heard so many false stories," he says, "about art and a stage career that they bore me and I have made it my business, therefore, to be absolutely honest in discussing my experience as an actor. The truth is, I never intended to be an actor. I started out as an engineer and attended Purdue University with this idea in mind.



Howard Marsh

"Here I followed the regular course and studied conscientiously. Somehow or other I came to the attention of George Ade, and by the time I reached my senior year, he wrote the annual play for the Harlequin Club. It was called 'The Fair Co-ed' and was later used as a professional vehicle for Elsie Janis.

"As good luck would have it, I was chosen to play the leading role in that production and to my surprise and delight I made good in it. Now the natural thing for me to say here was that I was suddenly imbued with a desire to become an actor and seek an engagement. But I wasn't.

"On the contrary, I went on with my school work, got my degree and then went into business. I worked in a bank, I taught music, I sold insurance. And finally I realized that I wasn't making much of a business success. 'I suppose it is rather foolish of me,' I said to myself finally, 'to throw away deliberately the advantage of having a natural singing voice and the ability to act. I had better stop all this miscellaneous work and go on the stage.'

"This is the truth and the absolute truth, without any romantic decoration. I got engaged at once. Of course, I count my present engagement in 'Show Boat' in the principal part of Ravenal as the greatest opportunity of my career."

Mammoth Irish Fair Is Opened Today

This is the opening day for the Mammoth Irish Fair. At 1 o'clock this afternoon the doors of Boston Garden will swing open upon a gorgeous setting of greens and flowers and life of Old Ireland. Tonight comes the official opening program, with notable guests in attendance, among them expected to be Governor Allen, Mayor Nichols, Senator David I. Walsh and former Mayor Curley.

For the last two weeks hundreds of workers have been rushing the completion of the giant task of transplanting a spot from the Emerald Isle into the heart of the Hub. The task was finished last night, and now the eye can feast upon scenery like that of Erin, for the Fair is a reproduction of the world renowned Donnybrook Fair.

For the next eight days the Garden will be gay with this spirit of Ireland. No expense has been spared in faithful portrayal for greater throngs of Bostonians of this great Irish festival.

There are in all more than 50 attractions in the Fair, including a miniature circus. For entertainment there will be Murphy's Killarney Quintet, the Four Dublin Dancers, O'Brien's Fiddlers, Killarney Roller Skaters, Toomey's Irish Pipers, Nora Toomey, champion Irish dancer; Twenty Irish Minstrels, Fahey Brothers' Emerald Gems Orchestra, noted singers, fifteen Irish colleens and many other features and acts.

Baritone Bows in Vaudeville

JOHN CHARLES THOMAS, the eminent baritone, noted for his international concert tours, is making his initial and exclusive vaudeville appearance at the New B. F. Keith's theater, starting tomorrow. Mr. Thomas is the latest acquisition made to its advanced vaudeville ranks by the Radio-Keith-Orpheum organization.

In bringing Mr. Thomas to this city for a Keith appearance on a vaudeville stage, the theater management was prompted to the action by repeated requests for artists such as this favorite baritone. He brings with him a new and exclusive repertoire of songs that should please every patron of the playhouse. Another headliner of note and one who made such an impression on his first week, is Charles (Chic) Sale, who is retained for a second week by popular demand.

Chas. (Chic) Sale

Mr. Sale will present an entirely new program of his famous rural characterizations, which he has actually taken from life. Mr. Sale goes from the Keith theater direct to a musical comedy production now being prepared for him by the Messrs. Shubert, through whose courtesy he is appearing in Boston, this week.

Among other stellar attractions that are scheduled for appearance on the Keith program are Timova and Balkoff, a colorful and sensational dance offering and Block and Sully, musical comedy stars who come here direct from the Palace theater, New York.

The popular priced matinees at this newest of Boston theaters are attracting great crowds daily, due to the extensiveness of the unusual vaudeville program being presented.

Sisters Make Debut in Father's Film

When "Two Weeks Off," co-starring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, comes to the Keith-Albee tomorrow, Margaret and Helen Beaudine will make their bow in this city.

They're eight and 13-year-old girls who are fortunate enough to have a film director for their father, and a mother who educated them in voice culture, music and dancing from babyhood. They dance and sing in prologues of the big movie theaters in Hollywood, and occasionally appear in pictures Beaudine directs.

"Two Weeks Off" is packed with the thrills of a novel love affair between Miss Mackaill and smiling Mulhall. The daughters of Director Beaudine appear in a benefit theatrical performance in the picture.

"Two Weeks Off" is based on a play by Kenyon Nicholson, who wrote the stage and screen success, "The Barker." Miss Mackaill's performance in that picture won high honors.

Director's Own Music Is Pops Feature

The Pop concerts in Symphony Hall will enter upon the fifth week of their 44th season, tomorrow evening, in Symphony Hall, when Alfredo Casella conducts a Symphonic program for the second Sunday night concert. He will thus first present to Boston his own "Concerto Romano" for Organ and Orchestra, with Ruth M. Connaton as soloist; likewise conducting Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony No. 6, and the Second Suite from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

Casella has made programs of special interest and appeal for the remainder of the week, with the exception of Tech night, on Thursday, when Arthur Fiedler will conduct.

GREAT EVENT AT REVERE

A battle of the clouds in fireworks will be the featured free attraction at Revere Beach, next Wednesday night.

This will be the second in the series of $10,000 fireworks shows arranged by the Amusement Division of the Revere Chamber of Commerce for the season at this popular shoreshore resort.

The battle of the clouds will be a spectacular display of pyrotechnics in the form of aerial bombs, skyrockets and shooting-stars, in a thrilling replica of the air battles fought during the World War.

Prior to the fireworks display there will be a swimming and diving exhibition at the Nautical Swimming Pool by a group of girls from the Sargent School of Physical Education.

Revere Beach has many new attractions this year, including Lindy's Flight, an amusement device depicting the historic achievement of the ace of aviators; a display of war trophies under the direction of Revere Post 940, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Blue Beard's Castle, a maze of hidden passageways with a laugh in each one; Palace of Wonders, where strange people from all parts of the universe are on display; Dragon's Pit, a fun-house with new angles and many others.

"FALL OF EVE"

OPENING FOR NORUMBEGA

With new attractions, new restaurants, new refreshment booths, and many new special features planned for the season, Norumbega Park today opens for its 83d season. The restaurant will be run by the Ginter Co., which has entirely remodeled and renovated the former restaurant. The new dining-room will be called, "Old Venice." Throughout the park all refreshment booths will be conducted by the Waldorf Lunch Co.

But in addition to these changes there are many others which will add to the attractiveness of the Auburndale resort. A new arcade, built at a cost of $10,000, the largest Ferris wheel in New England, dog and pony rides along the river front, the beautiful flowers in general, and the plot, serve as snares added to the peril of the dangerous woman. Little reason is now heard—there—for anybody at Hollywood patting himself on the back.

STAGE SHOW SNAPPY AND BRIGHT

A Bacianova film and a peppily sparkling stage show tie up for the major portion of the new program at the Metropolitan. The presentation, bright and moving with plenty of snap, always good to look at and listen to, is Jack Partington's revue, titled the "Rah! Rah! Rah! of 1929." Herein you get good music, well sung, so that you can truly sit pretty in your seat while the entertainment home-runs are batted out to eyes and ears, until every sound wave takes on the excellence of a Babe Ruth swat at the joy sphere. The eccentric dancer, Art Frank, toes his stuff ably. Others of sterling entertainment value are Helen Lewis and her Red Head Girl Band; Barbara Vernon, soprano, Foursome Quartette, and Low Beck. And Ted Claire with his Syncopators, and the orchestra, conducted by Guy Harrison, and the stage show is pleasingly satisfying.

Out of the picture, "A Dangerous Woman," which lost a good deal when bereft of its original name, "The Woman Who Needed Killing," there are born two clever pieces of actin. The honors go to Clive Brook, as the husband, and Sulia Edwards, noted old timer, as the native chief.

Bacianova

As to Bacianova, she fares but ill. Far better for her had the drama been silent; much of her broken English is unintelligible, and in this she drags out a poor second to Sulia with his pidgin lingo, and to the natives, who at least had something of harmony on their side, even if you didn't know what they were talking about. True, Bacianova can act, but a good Russian actress can be hamstrung. Or be badly handicapped.

Something of a similarity of locale, and of theme, makes one hark back to the wondrously well done "The Letter." In that masonry several things suffer. It is not the Jeanne Eagels photoplay.

Dialogue in general, and the plot, serve as snares added to the peril of the dangerous woman. Little reason is now heard—there—for anybody at Hollywood patting himself on the back.

CAST ADDITIONS

Claude Allister has been cast in "Three Live Ghosts," which Thornton Freeland will direct for United Artists, with Jack Buchanan, Charles McNaughton, Joan Bennett, Beryl Mercer, Hilda Vaughn and Wilfred Noy have been cast in the picture.

STAGE AND SCREEN

EAST MAY BE EAST, BUT LOVE BRINGS EARTH'S FOUR CORNERS TOGETHER IN NEW FILMS

WOMAN'S WILES lure a governor, as peppy Lily Damita tries her eyes on Mikhail Vavitch, in 'The Bridge of San Luis Rey" (Loew's Orpheum).

HONEYED SWEETNESS stares right out at you as May McAvoy does her stuff in "No Defense" (Scollay). She put the "b" in beautiful.

BOILED BARKIES are all to the mustard, says Dorothy Mackaill to Jack Mulhall in "Two Weeks Off" (Keith-Albee). Hot dawgs they're eating.

WHY MEN GO strong for loveliness may be explained by the looks of Myrna Loy in "The Desert Song" (Washington St. Olympia and Fenway).

FOREARMED IS forewarned if Lon Chaney gets the right message from Lupe Velez' teeth in "Where East Is East" (Loew's State).

DREAMS COME TRUE WHEN VISION LEADS

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

YOU NEVER can tell about these busy business men. You are apt to learn from them things beyond, and above, the strict business sphere. Remember what the wise Solomon said about the value of vision in life? It's somewhere in Proverbs. We know that when you produce a man with vision, you are showing a leader—one who has taken Emerson's advice and hitched his wagon to a star; one who is somewhere out there in the front of the race, great gaps ahead of the common run. Such we found out to be so in the case of Samuel Pinanski. We called to talk shop; but when it was over, we found we had met a man that is different. And what a vista he opened up into the future of his motion picture business!

• • •

MR. PINANSKI, as most Bostonians know, is executive chief of the familiar Netcco chain of screen playhouses. Not all, of course, have chatted informally with him, have felt the vivid personality, have seen the inner purposes looming behind the knowledge he imparts. Thus only, in the casualness of such a talk, you will learn that he is himself an artist. It's his hobby; palette, easel and brush. Just now he is doing a portrait in oils of his father. Another hobby—architecture, something he knows thoroughly. His private library in this field is superb. You find he is a man with vision, and is, therefore, creative and creating; is up and doing things. Local folk know Netcco from its Modern and Beacon and its many other theaters hereabouts; the chain stretches throughout New England. We query him, and soon find ourselves in the midst of news that is newsy.

Samuel Pinanski

• • •

"WHAT I AM trying to do," Mr. Pinanski responds to the question, "is to introduce in New England the so-called atmospheric type of theater. Just at this moment I am working out a new type, the Venetian. It will be built when we find the proper location. There will be an exterior interior, Venice street scenes. In the walls will be arches; bridges will pass over real water. The lighting will be in the windows of Venetian buildings; during intermissions gondolas with musicians will move up and down the canals as the patrons pass over the bridges, which will be suita.

"OUR NETCCO Egyptian is under construction in Brighton. Plans have been signed for the Oriental in Mattapan. Through such houses it is my hope to prove that the theater itself as much a part of dramland as any portion of the entertainment. We shall nowhere have duplication.

• • •

"DIVERSION is a part of everyone's life. All persons are responsive to colors. Color harmonies, I mean. Out of color environment the craftsman can work magic. Even more so than music, proper color — atmosphere — subtly induces relaxation. As the play goes on, we bring proper lights to bear; for evening scenes, hues in the theater; for dawn, rose tints, and so on. Ten years ago the atmosphere idea came to me; but conditions did not than warrant the change."

• • •

THIS man with vision was born in Boston, studied art in New England, and pursues it whenever he can get away from his many business demands. He sees far into the future; believes the time will come when pictures will be projected into a screenless stage, so the figures will seem to be moving about as in three-dimensional life; wants to see the legitimate stage survive; foresees the early coming of a screen wide enough to fill up the proscenium, and predicts other revolutionary changes in the motion picture business. Into the hour and a half we talked with him, he crammed ages of knowledge and wisdom, and we came out feeling an even deeper love for the films and admiration for showmen such as he.

Carlotta Was Singing a La King

By J. L. WARNER

"Get in touch with that girl first thing tomorrow morning—tonight, if possible. . . ." As the head of the Warner Bros. Vitaphone studios on the coast, I was sitting in my Hollywood home with one ear glued to the telephone receiver and the other ear turned towards a radio set that was going full steam ahead.

"If she's at all good looking, ask Zanuck to see her right away. She's got just the voice we want!" I shouted into the telephone. "Wait a minute! Wait a minute! Here's the announcer, I'll get . . ." Silence ensued, save for the masculine tones that now came over the air. ". . . And you have just been listening to Miss Carlotta King, the well-known concert soloist singing 'One Flower in Your Garden,' from that popular operetta, 'The Desert Song!'" "That's the name, Carlotta King." Mr. Warner turned again to the telephone. "Get in touch with her—quick!"

Carlotta King

One day later Carlotta King signed a contract to sing the important role of Margot in our production of that same operetta, "The Desert Song"—the current attraction at the Washington St. Olympia and Fenway Theaters. And all because I happened to be listening in to a radio program that evening.

Prior to her appearance in "The Desert Song," Miss King had little experience in motion picture work, despite the fact that she had been living in California for some years. Instead, she was doing concert work and appearing as piano soloist with symphony orchestras; for two years she toured as a soloist in vaudeville.

MISS DOROTHY WELD WEDS IN CHESTNUT HILL CHURCH TODAY

Reception at Bride's Home Follows Popular Society Girl's Marriage to Arthur Edwards Grannis, Jr.

A SLIM, GIRLISH VISION IN FROTHY TULLE, SPRINKLED with brilliants, Miss Dorothy Weld occupied the social sun's most central place today as she became Mrs. Arthur Edwards Grannis, Jr., in the cedar-scented, flower-decked Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill. Before a distinguished company of her own contemporaries and those of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Winsor Weld, she slowly moved down the dim church aisle on the arm of her father, with a silver prayer book in her hand. The Rev. John S. Moses, the rector, performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Appleton Grannis of Lowell, an uncle of the bridegroom.

SOLEMNLY THE RITES TOOK PLACE AT HIGH NOON WITHIN the church where banks of feathery cybotium fern and clusters of madonna lilies glorified pulpit and pews. Immediately afterwards the wedding guests motored to the home of the bride, at 47 Suffolk rd. for the reception. The bride looked out at her flower-decked world today beneath fairylike folds of tulle held in place with a circle of brilliants. Her gown, fashioned on princess lines, was of snowy tulle, with tight long sleeves and tier upon tier of cobwebby ruffles forming the skirt, with long swallow-tail back.

MISS MARY LOUISE BUTTERFIELD, AS MAID OF HONOR, looked charming in powder blue taffeta, with matching horsehair hat and butterfly roses with larkspur bouquet. The other four bridal attendants wore corn color taffeta with matching hats and bouquets of blue and white larkspur and ophelia roses. These were Miss Eleanora Grannis, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Nell Todd Baldwin, Miss Barbara Ewing of Pittsburgh and Mrs. William Byrd of East Orange, N. J. Charles Platt of Chestnut Hill, Pa., was best man.

MRS. A. WINSOR WELD, THE BRIDE'S MOTHER, ATTENDED the ceremony in a French gown of beige georgette trimmed with touches of blue, with a becoming hat of brown with beige gardenias. The gardenia-boutonnieres ushers included Walter W. Weld, a brother of the bride, Horace Soule, Theodore G. Bremer, Jr., Edward Nash of Brookline, John D. W. Morrill of Dedham, Perry Pease and Lathrop Haskins of New York. After a honeymoon in Europe the couple will live at 32 Holden Green, Cambridge, a street inhabited almost entirely by honeymoon couples.

MISS CATHERINE EVATT, A SISTER OF THE BRIDE-ELECT, is to be Miss Emily Evatt's maid of honor when she weds Mr. G. Winthrop Brown, Jr., of Chestnut Hill, next Saturday, June 1, in a late afternoon ceremony in All Saints' Church, Brookline. Jean Evatt, 10, is to be in the bridal procession with Miss Marjorie F. Evatt, another sister. Miss Janet Brown, of Chestnut Hill, Miss Harriet Hayward of Franklin, Mrs. O. Herbert Sherbrooke of Longmeadow, Miss Virginia Watts of Baltimore, Md., and Miss Mary Elizabeth Cunningham of Evanston, Ill. Charles M. Cutler of Newton Center will be best man. The ushers will be John Hyde Evatt of New York, Samuel Houghton of Chestnut Hill, Edward Dane of Chestnut Hill, Sherman R. Thayer of Newton, Archbold Van Buren of New York, Henry Lindenmeyer of New York, O. Herbert Sherbrooke of Longmeadow, and Richard H. Edwards, Jr., of Newton Center.

THE ENGAGEMENT OF MISS SALLY WAMBOLT, POPULAR Junior League member and a debutante this season, to David Mercer Gierasch of Brookline, will be announced at a luncheon given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Wambolt, at their Cambridge home, 145 Mt. Auburn st., today. Miss Wambolt's guests included Miss Nancy Johnson, Miss Dorothy Rogers, Miss Lucy Dodge, Miss Constance Creighton, Miss Nancy Baldwin, Miss Carolyn Read, Miss Eleanor Bennett, Miss Alice Ives, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Miss Dorothea Warren and Miss Dorothea Gierasch, sister of the prospective bridegroom. Mr. Gierasch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gierasch. Following the luncheon Miss Wambolt gave a tea dance for a larger group of friends. No wedding plans have been made as yet.

PROBABLY NO OTHER COSTUME IMPARTS THE CARNIVAL spirit more completely than the lowly overall, symbol of the free-dom of country life. At any rate, society's daughters took to overalls and other mannish attire with enthusiasm at the Longwood Cricket Club dance last evening. And many of them made charming pictures in the long blue overalls and huck shirts, notably Miss Virginia Lees. Following a bridal eve dinner party at the Country Club the entire wedding party of Miss Dorothy Weld arrived in evening costumes, lending a note of color in the assembly of blue uniformed "farmers" on the waxed floor.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL COSTUMES NOTED WAS THAT OF A Spanish boy worn by Mrs. Jonathan Brown of Chestnut Hill. Others included a sailor's costume worn by Mrs. Homer L. Bigelow, Mrs. Anne Breed of Chestnut Hill and a pink gingham frock and sun bonnet, Mrs. Norman B. Smith as a country girl with fish basket "vanity case" and Mrs. John Ferrin, her Chestnut Hill neighbor, in blue silk pajamas, were part of the rustic motif of the dance. John C. Hutchinson of Cambridge was master of ceremonies.

KING BECOMES OFFICIAL OF INSPIRATION

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Aboard Los Angeles Limited En Route to Los Angeles

NEW YORK, May 25—Henry King, director of "Stella Dallas," "White Sister," and other successes, has returned to Hollywood to find himself vice-president of Inspiration Pictures. Henry and Gypsy, his wife, were much in evidence in New York when I was there, but there was never a hint that Henry intended to do aught but direct. He had just finished "She Goes to War" for Inspiration.

Under the leadership of King, perhaps Inspiration will return to the days of glory it enjoyed when Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Richard Barthelmess and Ronald Colman were its stars. With all the mergers there is bound to be some added pep put into these production companies which have been functioning without any special noise.

J. Boyce Smith, former vice-president, becomes president, and Walter Camp will be chairman of the board of directors, but the production activities undoubtedly will rest largely on King's shoulders. Perhaps I had better explain he is not laying down his megaphone for an executive job. He will direct "Out of the Night," a novel by Rida Johnson Young, very shortly.

* * *

THE talkies have been a veritable godfather to Young Raymond Hackett. Until he played the part of the young lawyer in "The Trial of Mary Dugan" I ventured to say he wasn't known outside of Hollywood. Today he has appeared in film houses all over the country. It seemed to me all the Hearst papers where I visited published photographs of young Hackett and Norma Shearer in their best dramatic scenes. I wonder if he realizes his great luck.

His next screen appearance will be as Colleen Moore's leading man in "Footlights and Fools." Colleen, who hesitated a long time before she consented to make a talkie, will have not only Hackett in the cast, but Frederick March as well. The former was lent to First National by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the latter by Famous Players. William Seiter will direct.

* * *

IF you ever tried to write a column on the train you would know how diverting the trees, the cows and the horses can be. Even the man at the plow working on the rich soil of Nebraska farmlands seems so remote from the movies that you stop and do a mental soliloquy on his toil, forgetting that the dear public and Hollywood news and... not a discussion on the preparations for a crop.

That reminds me that Corinne Griffith and Walter Morosco will be pounding the rails toward California in a few weeks. They will sail from London May 26 and as originally plans still hold good, they leave at once for the west coast. Corinne will do, "Lillies of the Field" next, a talking number, of course. The same old "Lillies," by William Hurlburt, in which Marie Dorn starred.

* * *

THERE were waggers on Broadway that William Collier, Sr., would never be content to remain away from acting. Said one of his old cronies, "even if Collier makes a fortune directing he will yearn for the old grease paint."

How right all of the boys at the Lambs club were, for now Mr. Collier, who, as the world knows, is the father of Buster Collier, is about to play Fred Keller in, "The Family Upstairs." Walter Weems has been engaged to write the screen play and Alfred Werker will direct. "The Family Upstairs," by Harry Delf, is remade by Fox, but before talkies. That doesn't count, though, does it?

* * *

SALLIE EILERS, who manages to keep all Hollywood guessing which one of her numerous swains she expects to marry, is rejoicing in the opportunity just given her to make a talkie.

Sallie will play the feminine lead opposite Alan Hale in "Sailors Holiday," with Fred Newmyer directing. Joseph Franklin Poland, who has been writing stories for the films since Hector was a pup, authored "A Sailors Holiday," which gives not only Sallie and Alan Hale good roles but George Cooper as well.

* * *

WHAT, oh, what, will the musical comedy kings do on Broadway when it comes to the music written for their new shows? Some one suggests create new song writers. Why not? Find an Irving Berlin overnight. William Cary Duncan, who has written 26 musical shows, has a few more, with 22 of them playing on Broadway, is the latest recruit to Hollywood. He will write originals for Paramount, perhaps giving us a companion to "The Royal Vagabond," his most successful musical show.

* * *

CONTRACTS negotiated over long distance telephone are becoming more and more a part of the everyday activities in the Hollywood section. A producer will decide that he needs some certain actors, at work in New York, and in the evening of an eye that certain actor will be summoned to Hollywood pronto. Pat Collins, who created the cop in "The Racket" on the New York and the Los Angeles stage, and later played it on the screen with Thomas Meighan, was summoned to Los Angeles in this fashion by Radio Pictures. He was asked to play an important role in "Half Marriage," formerly known as "Companionate." He received the telephone call in the morning and in the afternoon he was on his way West.

CIRCUS COMING WITH TOM MIX AND TONY

It will be a great day tomorrow for the youth of Boston and youth on this occasion may mean anybody from six to 60. For the circus comes to town, the great Sells Floto circus, and just as if that was not enough to get everybody out of bed earlier than usual, the information comes along that Tom Mix and Tony and all the cowboys and cowgirls from the Mix Ranch will also arrive. They will not come in on the circus trains, but will arrive from St. Louis to join Sells Floto and will reach the So. '3 Station at 12:25 o'clock p. m.

By that time, acres of white canvas will be flying in the breeze on the Andrew sq. show grounds, getting ready for the opening show on Monday afternoon. The circus will remain all week, giving two shows daily.

Poodles Hanneford and Berta Beeson and all the stars of the circus will be waiting to give the world's most famous cowboy a real circus welcome. Tom is one of those chaps that still believe in "wide open spaces," and that is probably why he returned to a circus. He always felt cramped in the confines of a theater stage, but in the big-top he and Tony and his contingent of Wild West cowboys will have plenty of room to do the stunts which made them famous on the silver screen.

Nine new cars have been in Boston since Thursday awaiting the coming of Tom and Tony and their gang. A private Pullman for Tom and a palace horse car for Tony are in this added circus railroad equipment, as well as 2500 extra grandstand chairs and a big new canvas top to be added to the present one.

Ten thousand seats will be ready for Mix fans on Monday. The show comes here from Bridgeport and will be here early tomorrow morning. Of course, all the big circus features will be on view and Sells Floto promises a new program from last season. Manager Zack Terrell intends to take the old bromide, "All circuses are alike," out of the Sells Floto remembrances. Cliff Aeros, the man fired from the menage, Poodle Hanneford and his famous family of riders, three great and sensational flying acts, Allen King and arena of 20 tigers, Mabel Pelky, the golden girl in the golden whirl, five herds of elephants and plenty of clowns as well as a big menagerie, will be part of the program.

Premiere to Be Screen Benefit

Boston will be given an unusual opportunity of viewing at its first New England showing "The Cocoanuts," starring the four Marx Brothers, with Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw, musical comedy favorites, at a midnight performance next Wednesday, presented under the auspices of the New England Film Relief Association.

It will be recalled that the original stage play of the same name played in Boston in October, 1925, and was a great hit.

Tickets are on sale at all movie theaters in and around Boston, this premier having as its purpose, a benefit performance, given under the auspices of the New England Film Relief Association. The entire proceeds go for a most worthy cause.

Junior Leaders Inducted at Brown

Providence, May 25—Nine members of the junior class at Brown University were inducted into the Cammarian Club, student governing body, during exercises held in Sayles Hall, University Chapel.

The members are Philip M. Lingham, Littleton, Mass.; Cecil T. Russell, Lynn, Mass.; Edward L. Slatter, Jr., Uniontown, Penn.; Kennison T. Bosquet, Brockton, Mass.; David E. Alper, Brookline, Mass.; Norman P. Arnold, Wakefield, Mass.; Thomas Shotton, Jr., Washington, D. C.; Nelson H. Munsen, Jr., Groton, Conn., and Howard R. Smith, Stratford, Conn.

Wilbur to Open With 'Boom Boom'

The Wilbur Theater will open on June 10, for a summer season with the latest New York musical comedy success, "Boom Boom," having in its cast Frank McIntyre, Jeanette MacDonald, Cortez and Peggy, Jack Donahue, John Boyle and famous dancing girls.

Operetta to Remain Two Weeks Longer

The Messrs. Shubert have decided to keep their popular Schuberts of New York musical comedy at the Shubert Apollo Theater for another two weeks, beginning next Monday night, making the total period of the Boston engagement up to four weeks.

This week's added attraction for the highly successful musical play, for although here twice before, it is presented anew and will cover the longest period of any of its visits.

Ready to Greet Federation Delegates

NO matter which way Massachusetts clubwomen turn next Monday, all roads will lead to Swampscott.

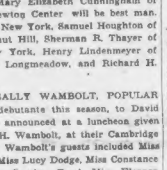
That much-anticipated Biennial Council of the General Federation moves into the New Ocean House there that night.

All day Monday the special hostesses from the Bay State will be traveling to and from the two railroad terminals with the out-of-town guests as their passengers.

Chauffeuring will be one job the women will be the fondest of since it will afford added opportunities to know those women whose interests are common with their own in the great club movement of the world.

To Mrs. Edwin L. Pride, retired clerk of the State Federation, falls the honor of hostess to the General Federation president, Mrs. John F. Sippel, who will arrive from Baltimore, Md., to preside over the sessions which open Tuesday morning.

Minus the fanfare of trumpet and bugle, hundreds of representatives of the 2,000,000 members of the 14,000 affiliated clubs of the General Federation will come from every country in the Union and from many foreign countries to attend this meeting.



Mrs. John F. Sippel

Boston entertained the Council 21 years ago.

The busy whirl of activities and last-minute details have kept Mrs. Azel A. Packard, State president, who is to be the toastmistress of the State Dinner, and Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter, chairman of the local Biennial board, more than busy with the multitude of final arrangements.

The keynote of the meeting is to be "The General Federation as It Serves the Community." The efforts of this body toward raising the standards of life and living in the home, the community, and the Nation, will be reflected in addresses of experts, reports, programs, plans and discussions on the home, citizenship, public welfare, health and child welfare, the fine arts, international relations, education and legislation.

NEW ENGLAND HADASSAH REGIONAL

The seventh annual convention of the New England Regional senior and junior Nadassah units will be held at the Hotel Statler tomorrow in an all-day session.

Dr. Maurice B. Hexter, of the Federated Jewish Charities, is to be the principal speaker, and in the afternoon will discuss "The Jewish Agency."

Mrs Gertrude C Mann, of Roxbury, is conference chairman, and will bring greetings to the New England delegates from the Boston unit.

Hadassah is the women's organization of the Zionist Organization of America and its chief aims are to foster Zionist ideals in this country and maintain the Hadassah medical unit in Palestine.

To this end the conference will instruct its delegates to promote a new membership roll of 50,000 by the opening of the Fall season that the enlarged program along rehabilitation lines for Palestine might be adopted by these women in the interest of the National Homeland.

Registration will start at 9 a. m. and an hour later Mrs. Alvah Salter will preside over a business session. Luncheon will follow at 12:30 and at the time several presidents, past and present of the Boston Chapter of Hadassah and the New England Zionist Regional will speak briefly.

Mrs. David A. Lourie, retiring president of the Boston chapter; Mrs. Lewis Goldberg, the new president of the Hub unit; Miss Libby Jacobson, president, Junior Hadassah; Mrs. Helen G. Simons, president, New England Juniors, and Mrs. S. W. Myers, are to be among the speakers.

Those in charge of the arrangements include Miriam Muzan chairman of the juniors; Mrs. M. Kalman, Mrs. L. G. Stone, Mrs. A. Wagman, Mrs. H. D. Cooper, Mrs. C. Askowith, Mrs. Joseph Abrams, Mrs. Carl Lebovich, Mrs. L. Berman, Mrs. Archibald Silverman, Mrs. George Mann, Hannah Goldberg, Bella Slotnick, Ruth Zakon and Minna Margolis.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Massachusetts Daughters of the American Revolution dedicated their State Forest at Goshen with a gathering of more than 250 members from the middle and western part of the State. Many of the newly elected State officers attended.

Greetings from Governor Allen were brought by W. A. L. Bazeley who lauded the forest as the first as lasting memorial to this institutional body of women.

This tract of 1020 acres fronts the road leading from Goshen to Ashfield. A bronze tablet placed on a boulder, suitably inscribed, a mile distance from the State road, marks the location.

This land was purchased during the last year of the administration of Mrs. James Charles Peabody as State Regent and is to serve as a lasting memorial to this institutional body of women.

The presentation of the forest was made by Mrs. Peabody and received by Mr. Bazeley, State Commissioner of Conservation. The unveiling of the marker was made by Mrs. James Wheeler, State chairman of conservation for the organization.

ST. JOSEPH GUILD

The last meeting of the Guild of St. Joseph's Home for Aged Women this season will be held at the Home, 321 Centre st., Dorchester, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. M. CHAPTER 6

"YOU promise me you'll never tell anyone, Irma?" Kitty sat by the side of her friend in the train rattling from Connecticut.

White-faced, and with a terrible load of oppression on her, she awaited the reassuring answer.

"Come off it, kid! What do you take me for? Do you think I'd give away a pal?"

"I tell you, Irma. I don't remember anything that happened, from the time I lay back on the sofa after those hateful drinks!

"Oh, Irma—it's so baffling—if I could only remember how I came to be in that bed?"

"You were there, sure enough. What's the use of talking? Forget it, I say——"

"But when you went away—"

"You were asleep on the sofa. You're not accustomed to cocktails, you see. And I simply couldn't wake you!"

"But how—how did I get up stairs and into that bed?"

"I don't know. You keep mum about what happened. Remember that if the story leaks out, people'll gossip about you, and say all kinds of things, and you won't have any come-back, either, because there's small chance of Frank ever marrying you. . ."

"Marrying me?" gasped Kitty, her face white. "Why should he? He—he's nothing to me! Oh, Irma!"

"Don't be such a simpleton!" Irma was becoming exasperated. "Surely you see how he's compromised you? If people were to know you spent the night out there alone with him, the only thing to save your reputation would be marriage! And I'm telling you Frank isn't of the marrying sort!"

It was pitiful how easily Kitty had swallowed Irma's fabrications.

With this weapon against Kitty in her hand it would be fairly easy to compel the latter to include her—Irma Painter—in those meetings with young Barron.

And where that would lead to Irma was fairly confident. . .

The weeks went by. Jimmie had completed his invention and applied for a patent.

Kitty was seeing him regularly. She would tell herself, at times, that she was quite certain of his deep feeling for her, that he loved her truly but something—somewhere—was holding him back . . .

Irma was often with them. It hurt Kitty that Jimmie should so easily accept the presence of a third person at their meetings . . . that he could turn to Irma for his opinion, sometimes forgetting to ask Kitty's when the latter was longing to give it.

"If you're disappointed because Irma comes along, dear," he said to her, "why on earth do you let her? Why don't you put your foot down and say frankly that you and I want to be out by ourselves?"

"I hate to hurt anybody's feelings," Kitty had prevaricated.

"Rubbish! You aren't as weak and flabby as all that."

Week by week, it seemed to Kitty, Irma was cleverly gaining ground.

* * *

The summer slipped away. Jim mie was hailing on tenterhooks for the verdict from the patent office in Washington.

She hadn't seen him for a long while and was too proud to try and get in touch with him or employ Irma's tactics, when a special delivery letter reached her at the office.

It was a queer, curt missive

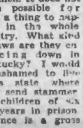
The Curious Quizzer

Winthrop Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures

THE QUESTION

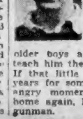
What do you think of the 15-year sentence imposed on a six-year-old Kentucky boy for slaying another boy with a gun after a quarrel?

MISS ANNA O'NEIL, Cottage Park rd.—It is too terrible to think about. They must have mighty queer laws in Kentucky to allow such a thing to happen. It is good to live in Massachusetts, where sentencing so young a child to prison would not be permitted by any court. Why, that little boy is no more than a baby, and he can not realize what he has done. Of course, the child knew he was doing something wrong in his act, committed in childish anger, should be treated by punishment in a way altogether different way than to give him 15 years in jail.



* * *

MRS. FLORENCE CORDES, Wilshire st.—It is a shame to send that little temperamental child to prison by a verdict of Kentucky jurymen. It does not seem possible for such a thing to happen in this whole country. What kind of laws are they enforcing down in Kentucky? I would be ashamed to live in a state where they send stammering children of six years to serve 15 years in prison. I think the sentence is a gross miscarriage of justice. There are other ways than that to punish the boy to make him know what an awful crime he committed.



HERBERT ELDREDGE, Faunbar ave.—Imposition of such a sentence on a baby boy . . . for he is no more than a baby at that age, is not right. If he has to serve 15 years in a Kentucky prison for something he could not know the serious ness of, I think the laws in that State should be amended. The crime he committed, of course, is the worst possible for adults to be guilty of, but it stands to reason that no boy of six would deliberately take the life of his playmate if he could realize the gravity of the offense.

* * *

ERNEST ANDERSON, Beach rd.—I feel it is a cruel way to bring about his release from prison. He is only a child, and could never have pulled the trigger of his father's shotgun with intent to kill this little chum because of a little backyard disagreement over a scrap of iron junk." The boy should never be sent to a reformatory to mix with older boys and youths who will teach him the ways of real crooks if that little kid has to serve 15 years for something he did in an angry moment, when he arrives home again, he will be a regular gunman.

ALL WET IN CAR PLUNGE

Jerry Gardner, Jim Maloney's trainer, who suffered a ducking but no serious injuries when his auto broke through the railing of a bridge in East Somerville and plunged into the Mystic river. He opened the door and clambered to the roof of the car, from where he was rescued. Staff photo shows him at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

GIRL DANCER, FOOT BROKEN, PLEADS TO DO ACT

Warden May Yet Bow to Cupid for Convict's Girl

GIRL HURT, BEGS TO DANCE

With her right foot broken from an unexplainable accident during a dress rehearsal in the Repertory Theater, pretty 22-year-old Miss Ethel Noring of 704 Commonwealth ave., Back Bay., begged her physician to permit her to dance at the annual recital of Lucille Perry Hall in the theater last night.

The doctor not only declined the comely young amateur dancer's request but informed her that her foot will be encased in a plaster cast for the next five or six weeks.

Miss Noring was heartbroken over the physician's announcement, as she had an important place in the recital program. She was to have been one of the temple dancers in a dance play, "The Vengeance of Tan-Tse," and was to dance a solo as "The Silver Moth" in a dance play called "The Fireflies."

Wants $75,000 for Somerville School

Mayor Leon M. Conwell has recommended to the Somerville Board of Aldermen an appropriation of $75,000 for the erection of a new eight-room school building on land owned by the City of Somerville in the "Ten Hill Farm" section of the city.

This section of the city has been built up in the past several years and there is need for a school for the children living there. The matter has been referred to the finance committee of the aldermen who will report at their next meeting on June 13.

900 in Annual May Procession

Nine hundred boys and girls will participate in the annual May procession of St. Catherine's parish, Thomes sq., Charlestown, at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow. The president of St. Catherine's Alumni Association, Joseph W. McCarthy, will be chief marshal. Miss Eleanor Jule will be the May Queen. Solemn benediction will follow in St. Catherine's Church, with the pastor, Rev. Henry Lyons, celebrant, Rev. Henry J. Evers, deacon, and Rev. John J. Sullivan, sub deacon

RESCUED FROM SUBMERGED CAR ROOF

Jerry Gardner, 38, Jim Maloney's trainer, escaped from an automobile, partially submerged in Mystic river in East Somerville, after the machine, which he had been operating, had broken through a rail fence and plunged 13 feet.

Gardner, suffering from a shaking and immersion, was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital by a passing autoist. The hospital authorities said that although his condition is not serious he will be held overnight.

Gardner was driving his machine along Mystic ave., in the direction of Charlestown, at the time of the accident. Between Moreland and Fremont sts. the avenue is partially blocked because of some construction work. Gardner swerved his machine to avoid the obstruction but it skidded, broke through the fence and rolled into the water.

Gardner opened one of the doors of the sedan before the water reached to the panels of the side windows. He climbed on top of the automobile and was rescued by John C. Maling of 143 Pearl st., Reading, Edmund Sefton of 16 Wilson ave., Malden, and Clarence Rand of Henderson st., Somerville.

MAYOR AGAIN RAPS QUINCY POLICE

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath of Quincy today continued his attack on the police department of that city for its failure to stamp out lawlessness, particularly among the gangs of young boys.

Recent depredations in the municipal bathhouses at Quincy Point, the mayor declared, could have been averted had the police been more alert.

Crash Victim Dies of Head Injuries

His skull fractured by an automobile which hit him in Dorchester ave. Fred Brugner, 50, married, of Dorchester ave., South Boston, is dead at Carney Hospital. The driver took the injured man to the hospital and told the police he did not see Brugner until after the accident. He was not held.

SHE IS SET ON PRISON WEDDING

Josephine Ladazta, 21, of Cambridge, made another appeal today to Warden James L. Hogsett at State Prison for permission to marry Andrew Mackiewicz, who violated his parole and was returned to the prison to spend at least two more years.

The warden listened earnestly to the girl's plea, but declined to make a final decision today. He said he expects to make a thorough investigation and confer with the parole board before deciding whether a wedding will take place within the gray stone walls.

Mackiewicz was sentenced to three to five years in prison on December 18, 1924. He was paroled from the prison camp at Rutland a little over a year ago. On May 16 he and Miss Ladzata filed marriage intentions in Cambridge, planning an early wedding, but Mackiewicz was arrested a few days later for drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. When arraigned in the East Cambridge court it was learned he was a paroled convict and immediately he was returned to the prison for violation of his parole.

SUES HOSPITAL FOR BABY'S FINGERS

Meriden, Ct., May 25 (INS)—Charging that a careless nurse cut off two fingers of a baby girl in the Meriden hospital, a Southington father today is suing the hospital for $25,000.

The father, Charles Goodrich, has sued on behalf of the baby, Charlotte Goodrich, born on December 18, 1923. A nurse, clipping bandages off the baby's hands, cut off the index and third fingers of the left hand, it is claimed.

As a result of the amputation, the father charges, the left side of the girl may be paralyzed when she grows up. He alleges negligence on the part of the nurse.

Papers in the suit have been served on the hospital and it was expected the formal action would begin in Superior court, New Haven, today.

ENVOYS SPLIT ON LIQUOR POLICY

Copyright, 1929, International News Service

Washington, May 25—The foreign diplomats in Washington, who are the most envied of all social lights in the capital because they can import and legally serve fine liquors and wines, did not fall over themselves in their eagerness to embrace the suggestion advanced by the dean of the corps, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador, that should President Hoover request it they might give up their liquor.

On the contrary, the though put forward by Sir Esme received a somewhat frigid reception, particularly among the Latin diplomats whose countries have always regarded wine as a staple article of diet.

Many of the ambassadors are absent from Washington, and the charge d'affaires were reluctant to express opinions on the revolutionary suggestion that the diplomatic colony—long an oasis in theoretically dry Washington—might voluntarily go on the water cart.

But the private comment of the diplomats might be said to reflect absolutely no enthusiasm for the idea.

Dr. Herman Elarde, ambassador from Peru, for example, said: "Ah! I think I would have to consult with my colleagues before considering it. I do not drink myself, but there are others who do and naturally they would have to be considered."

The State Department was somewhat agitated and a bit embarrassed over the matter.

From a strictly legal and technical standpoint, foreign envoys cannot relinquish their right to import and serve liquor. The rights and perquisites of foreign diplomats are enshrined in the revised statutes of the United States, and are hard and fast rules. No foreign envoy can waive any of these rights under American law.

Bulgars Come in on Kellogg Pact

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 25.—The Chamber of Deputies ratified Bulgaria's adherence to the Kellogg renunciation of war pact.

The Chamber also ratified a treaty of arbitration and conciliation recently concluded between Bulgaria and the United States.

The ratifications were voted without discussion or dissenting votes.

TRAFFIC LIGHT FAILS IN NEWTON

The new automatic traffic signal tower installed in Nonantum sq., Newton, at a cost of about $2000, proved a dismal failure when it went into operation for the first time during the rush hours.

Within a few minutes after the lights began to flash the worst traffic tieup ever to occur in the square ensued. It required the combined efforts of nearly a dozen policemen to unravel the tangle. The use of the lights was at once discontinued and city officials are today trying to solve the problem.

HOLDS 2 LAUNDRY MEN IN 'LARCENY'

Francis J. McDonald and Adam Jaquith, part owners of the Anchor Laundry Co., Freeport st., Dorchester, were arraigned in Municipal court today, charged with the larceny of $10,000 from Joseph Palmer, a third member of the firm.

Judge Zottoli declined purisdiction, found probable cause and held McDonald and Jaquith in $5000 each for June hearing.

Palmer alleged he was taken into the firm, but through manipulation of papers his $10,000 equity was impaired and eventually would be lost.

Against Prohibition

Plymouth, Eng., May 25 — Lady Astor, who is a strong temperance advocate, told an audience here that if prohibition in England depended on her deciding vote she would not give it, as the country was not ready for prohibition.

GIVES "POPPY DAY" MITE

NAB HUB YOUTHS IN WORCESTER BURGLARY

Worcester, May 25.—Less than two hours after they had allegedly stolen an automobile in Boston, four 17-year-old youths, three giving Boston addresses, were captured here in the act of breaking into a Bellevue st. store.

The arrests were made after a sharp struggle. Half a dozen police officers of the flying squadron were required to subdue the burglar suspects.

The prisoners identified themselves as William Reardon, living at a Back Bay hotel, Boston, Chester Reno of Allston, Fred Kelley of Rochester, N. Y., and John Carey of Rutland sq., South End.

The capture of the quartet resulted from a tip telephoned to police headquarters. A citizen reported that he saw suspicious looking young men in the rear of the Bellevue st. store.

Two automobile loads of officers were rushed to the scene. They found and overpowered a lookout, stationed in a parked car later identified as the one missing from Boston. Entering the building, they encountered the three other youths. A melee followed. Superior police numbers won the battle.

Boston police were asked to look up the records of the prisoners. The latter were booked on charges of breaking and entering. Additional charges were to be filed later today.

Open Hub-to-Cape Air Service May 30

Regular airplane passenger service between Boston and the South Shore, Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket will be inaugurated on May 30, according to announcement today by Atlantic Marine Airways, Inc. Eight six-passenger seaplanes will be used in this service, all of them of approved types, including three flying Fokker mono-seaplanes.

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards is chairman of the board of directors, and the officers of this company are Charles M. Ewan, president; Henry R. Nichols treasurer, and Thomas Murphy, George Murray, Theron R. Kelly, Edwin J. Ryan and Frederick A. Stevens, directors.

DONKEY'S LONG DEMOCRATIC TAIL CUT

Ninety years ago the Democratic donkey wagged a long tail, it was revealed today when John C. Branth, working in his Waltham garden, turned up a coin apparently used as a Democratic campaign device during Martin Van Buren's term in the presidency.

On one side of the coin appears the Democratic donkey, galloping in full stride with a long tail flung out behind. On the reverse side is a turtle, bearing a miniature treasury building upon his back with the label: "Executive Emanclenpe" with this quotation from Van Buren's inaugural address: "I will follow in the footsteps of my illustrious predecessor." (Andrew Jackson.)

Branth's garden is on the site of the old Bemis Stratton Tavern on the Post rd. and it is his surmise that the coin was dropped by a tavern guest about 1837.

A finer point for speculation, however, is who bobbed the donkey's tail, and when, where and why occurred the amputation that today is shown on the Democratic party insignia.

State Officers to Attend Initiation

With many of the State officers in attendance Court St. Ann, Catholic Daughters of America, will initiate a large class of candidates on Monday evening in Walnut Hall, Neponset. Grand Regent Miss Francis J. Hickey will be in charge, assisted by District Deputy Mrs. Lillian Jackson. Following the initiation, a musical program will be offered and refreshments served.

BOYS FIND BODY OF BABY

While searching parties were combing a wide area, three boys today found the body of three-year-old Edmund J. Mulse, Jr., of Ripley st., Malden, in Spot Pond brook in that city.

Death was due to drowning and the body had caught in some debris at a culvert, exposing it to view. Walter Regan, Lee Scribner and Eugene Gifford made the discovery.

The boy's parents thought he had gone to a May party at Pine Banks, but when it was learned he was not there the search began, many neighbors joining in the hunt.

PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF CHOATE

Memorial services for Charles F. Choate, Jr., one of the leading members of the Massachusetts bar, were held before the full bench of the Supreme Court today.

The courtroom was thronged with prominent attorneys, members of Mr. Choate's family and friends. Many glowing tributes were paid by prominent members of the bar.

A memorial to Mr. Choate, prepared by Bentley W. Warren, Robert G. Dodge, Reginald Foster, Harry E. Warner and Huch D. McLellan, was read by Mr. Warren and then presented to the court, being accepted by Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg.

EULOGIZED FROM BENCH

Justice Rugg, from the bench, eulogized the memory of Mr. Choate, while other speakers included John L. Hall, who was Mr. Choate's law partner; Robert G. Dodge, Hugh D. McLellan, Frederick P. Fish and Thomas W. Proctor. Mr. Choate, who was senior member of the firm of Choate, Hall & Stewart, died on November 20, 1927. His home was in Southboro and at the time of his death he was recognized as the leader of the Boston bar. He graduated from the Harvard law school in 1880 and within a few years had established a successful practice.

The tributes paid him today stressed the fact that his keen insight into human nature made him one of the ablest cross-examiners in the country. Of his private life the memorial said:

HIS PRIVATE LIFE

"His private life he was reserved, almost shy, but to those who knew him well he was a charming and delightful companion, unusually well read and able to state in clear and well chosen language the result of his readings and his reflections on what he had read. This quality of reserve accompanied him in most of his relations throughout his life. It never impaired, however, his professional efficiency. The only evidence of it in the courtroom was to be found in his invariable consideration and courtesy toward the court, his adversaries, the jury, the witnesses and the court attendants."

Services for Veterans

Funeral services for George Anson Walker, Civil War veteran, of 48 Center st., Dorchester, were held at his home with the Rev. Evans of Dorchester officiating. Burial was in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Book Barred in Hub Long Under U. S. Ban

Washington, May 25 (INS)—Voltaire "Candide," seven copies of which were seized by customs inspectors in Boston, has been on the "blacklist" for some time, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman said today.

The confiscated books were consigned to a professor of French at Harvard University.

Lowman added that the list of "forbidden literature" includes 174 other volumes of foreign authors. They are said to "cast an evil influence on the mind and morals of Americans."

Mrs. Baker Wins Third Consecutive W. G. A. Title

BEATS MISS STEBBINS IN FINAL ROUND, 7 AND 6

By BILL GRIMES

For the third consecutive time, Mrs. Edward H. Baker, Jr., of Oakley and Scituate, won the Women's Golf Association of Boston championship today at the Charles River Country Club by defeating Miss Frances E. Stebbins of Brae-Burn, 7 and 6.

Although Mrs. Baker, with the exception of the semi-final round, played beautiful golf throughout the week, she turned in her best performance today, going to the turn in 43 after starting with a 6 and winding up with a 5 on the shorth ninth.

Miss Stebbins deserved a better fate. Off the tees and on the fairways she outplayed the champion time and again, but her ragged work around the greens brought about her downfall.

At the third and fifth holes, Miss Stebbins was on the edge of the green intwo as a result of two great shots, but she took three to get on each time, which cost her the hole and gave her only a half on the fifth.

To make matters worse, Miss Stebbins was stymied at the sixth and eighth holes. Of the 14 holes Miss Stebbins won only one, that being the ninth.

This is the fourth time that Mrs. Baker has won the W. G. A over a period of five years. Five years ago she led the field at Weston, was put out the following year at Kernwood by Mrs. Stanwood, came back in 1927 to win at Woodland, and repeated last year at Weston.

Hole by hole description of match follows:

First hole—412 par 4—Mrs. Baker hooked into the trap, from where she played out to the flat, short of the pond and was still short of the green in three. After a nice drive, Miss Stebbins' second landed in the bank of the bunker and she was short with her third. The hole was halved with 6's.

MRS. BAKER GOES ONE UP

Second hole—492 yards, par 5—Miss Stebbins was out in front of the tee but half tapped her second shot, then pushed her third slightly to the right of the green. Mrs. Baker was right down the middle, getting home nicely with her third and then laid her approach putt dead to win the hole with a 5, after Miss Stebbins had missed her putt.

Third hole—336 yards, par 4—Mrs. Baker pushed her tee shot into the rough and was some 50 yards short of the green in two, while Miss Stebbins put together two beautiful shots to reach the edge of the green. Mrs. Baker played a wonderful approach dead to the pin and won the hole with a 4, when Miss Stebbins' approaching strong, missed her putt coming back. Mrs. Baker 2 up.

Fourth hole—153 yards, par 3—Both were home from the tee and laid their approach putts stoney, to halve the hole in par.

Fifth hole — 395 yards, par 4 — Again Miss Stebbins was out in front from the tee, and as before Mrs. Baker had pulled her second shot, the challenger smacked a brassie, just short of the green. Mrs. Baker was on nicely with her third and got a half when Miss Stebbins again approached strong and missed coming back.

Sixth hole—337 yards, par 4—Mrs. Baker had a slight advantage from the tee. Miss Stebbins clicked her second into the trap on the right. Mrs. Baker was heavy with her second shot and failed to get home. Miss Stebbins came out of the trap beautifully, but a stymie closed in the door on what looked to be an easy win and the hole was halved with 5's.

Seventh hole—446 yards, par 5—Mrs. Baker was four yards out front and played her second over the trees beyond the bunker. Miss Stebbins attempted to go over, but topped her shot and wound up in the woods, from where she was forced to play out safe and wound up with an eight, losing the hole to a par 5. Mrs. Baker 3 up.

Eighth hole—405 yards, par 4—Both hit fine drives and second shots to this green, Mrs. Baker being just shy with Miss Stebbins half way into the rough. They chipped on and again Mrs. Baker laid her opponent a stymie and won the hole with a 5, as her opponent was forced to take three putts. Mrs. Baker 4 up.

MISS STEBBINS WINS ONE

Ninth hole—176 yards, par 3—Mrs. Baker's tee shot stopped at the edge of the trap on the edge of the green, from where she chipped short and lost the hole to a three, as Miss Stebbins after driving to the right hand edge of the green laid her approach to within six inches of the cup to win her first and only hole. Mrs. Baker 3 up.

Tenth hole—435 yards, par 55—Both hit fine shots from the tee to the 10th and were just short in two. After Miss Stebbins had pitched short of the green, Mrs. Baker made a pitch and run short to within 10 feet of the cup and won the hole with a 6. Mrs. Baker 4 up.

Eleventh hole—239 yards, par 3—Both caught traps at the 11th tee and Miss Stebbins went over with her second shot while Mrs. Baker's second caught the green. Miss Stebbins failed to get dead on her approach and lost the hole to a 4. Mrs. Baker 5 up.

Twelfth hole—360 yards, par 4—Although Mrs. Baker hooked her tee shot she put her second right on the edge of the trap in front of the green, while Miss Stebbins was within five feet of the cup. Miss Stebbins sliced her drive, landing in the rough on top of the hill and she had played three when she reached the green and lost the hole to a 4, when Mrs. Baker sank down with 3 putt, Mrs. Baker 6 up.

Thirteenth hole—348 yards, par 4—Both sliced into the rough from the tee and Mrs. Baker was well short of the brook with her second, while Miss Stebbins played a beautiful shot to the foot of the hill and then chipped on, but the best she could get was a half as Mrs. Baker's third was home and she was down in two putts. Mrs. Baker 6 and 5.

Harvard Takes On Brown Nine Today

By TED LYNCH

WITH a victory over Dartmouth safely stowed away, Harvard seeks another conquest this afternoon when the Crimson faces Brown at Soldiers Field. It is the second game in two days for the Crimson nine and the first of a two-game series with the Brunonians.

Harvard does not expect much trouble from the Brown team. The Providence ball tossers have only won three of their nine ball games. The worst started off the season with six defeats but right now is on the crest of a victory wave with three straight wins to its credit.

Both teams this afternoon are banking on second string hurlers to pull them through. Coach Fred Mitchell had Red MacHale warming up during the late stages of the Dartmouth game and the sophomore will get the call this afternoon.

Brown's best hurler is Herbert Rawlings. However, Coach Jean Dubuc is saving Rawlings for the Providence game on Tuesday. This gives Hub fans a chance to see a real boy in action. Arthur Soth Oheim, late of Brookline high, is the Brown starting hurleer. The former scholastic star has turned in several good performances for the visitors and Coach Dubuc expects him to hold his own this afternoon.

Dubuc claims that his club has just hit its real stride and with the poor start a thing of the past, feels that his charges can come through against the Crimson. The Brunonians have been weak at the stick this season. Only one regular, Capt. Wright, is hitting over the proverbial .300, and this lack of thumping power probably will determine the margin of victory this afternoon.

EAGLES BATTLE FORDHAM NINE

New York, May 25—Boston College opens a six-day campaign in which it meets three rival Jesuit colleges here this afternoon when it plays Fordham on Fordham Field.

Monday, Boston College will play Georgetown and Thursday it meets Holy Cross. Coach Hugh Duffy hopes to see his team sweep through these games, starting with the Maroons today, and then lay claim to the Eastern title.

Johnny Murphy is Jack Coffey's choice for the mound duties this afternoon. The tall right-hander has been pitching great baseball for the Bronx team this spring. In his last appearance he shut out West Point.

Murphy pitched against Boston College in Newton and lost, 5 to 4. He gave B. C. but eight hits and had victory clutched when a fifth-inning rally by Boston brought it across to a win.

Murphy has surpassed Capt. Johnny Cooney, Fordham's left-handed pitcher, this spring. Cooney was expected to be the star boxman for Coffey's club before the season began, but Murphy has taken the leading role from him.

Jim O'Connor, a sophomore, pitcher for B. C, was announced as the visting hurler by the Boston coach. It was McNulty who beat Fordham before but this flinger has a sore arm, though he may be drafted into service today.

Medford High Wins Meet by One Point

Despite the sensational running of Kenton Farrell, Medford high school nosed out Brockton high school in a thrilling track meet at Alston st. field Friday afternoon, 36½ to 35½. Robert Andrews outsprinted James Doherty to win second place in the 220-yard run and give Medford its one-point victory.

Lloyd Allen of Medford ran a surprising 440, covering the distances in 53 3-5 seconds, to defeat Andrews and Richard Sproul. The trio finished a foot apart.

Desautels Gets Draw; Hoot Verdict

Nashua, N. H., May 25—Eddie Desautels of Dover outpointed Leo Desrosier of Nashua in a 10-round battle, but at the end Referee Arthur Conlon of Manchester called the contest a draw. The crowd hooted the decision.

In the semifinal Walter Theroux of Nashua knocked out Al Cross of Newmarket in the second round. Ray Desrosier of Nashua won on a technical knockout in the third from young Chester of Dover.

Van Rossem Asked to Join Olympic Body

Amsterdam, May 25 (AP)—The organization committee of the tenth Olympic games to be held at Los Angeles has invited M. Van Rossem, general secretary of the Amsterdam games last year, to assist the American committees in an advisory capacity. It was learned today. It is understood Van Rossem is considering the offer.

RAWSON CHOICE FOR GO WITH SMITH

Rawson will attempt to score his 15th knockout in his 16 professional starts. Of his 15 knockouts, 10 have been scored in the first round, and five in the second. His two latest knockouts have been the most sensational of them all, for Hambone Kelley lasted only two minutes and 35 seconds, while Joe Monte lasted an even shorter time—one minute and 15 seconds.

The big boy will finish his training at Toland's Gym today with Shadow Bowden and Ray Thompson, under the direction of Al Lacey. The former Olympic trainer has whipped Rawson into marvelous fighting condition. All semblance of fat has disappeared from Rawson's waistline, and he has the trim look of a real fighter now. He will be favored to beat Smith, but the Cohasset heavyweight can punch on his own account and may upset the dope.

Less than four months ago, Smith fought Young Stribling a toe-to-toe battle for eight rounds in New Orleans, just a few weeks before the Sharkey-Stribling bout. The scrap was stopped in the eighth round and Smith declared the loser on a technicality, but the talk that flooded the Southland was that the bout should be stopped to save Stribling from a defeat. A defeat, at that time, would have ruined the proposed Sharkey-Stribling fight.

MR. BOSTON
By JACK CONWAY

"MUSIC has been known to calm raving maniacs, while the appearance of Babe Ruth at the bat quiets the restlessness of youth," said Mr. Boston today. "Bob Quinn turned the third base bleachers at Fenway Park over to the members of the Knot-Hole Gang. They dashed around the pasture like young colts other than when Babe came to bat. They then gathered in a huddle and held their breath until the great slugger had done his best.

"I know the youngsters would have liked to have seen Babe bust one, but Danny MacFayden happened to have different ideas. It was only a few years back when Danny, a Somerville boy, journeyed to Fenway Park to see Babe in action. Within a few years he was to make Ruth look like just another ball player.

"After taking a peek at the grandstand crowd at the Friday game, one must admit baseball is still the national pastime. I saw one party consisting of father, mother, a boy of about five years and a baby in arms. Thousands of ladies attended the game.

"There were other groups of women accompanied by anywhere from one to a dozen children. No excuse for the ladies to miss a ball game now. They can bring the children along with them.

"The scene reminded me of those I have seen at the dog tracks in New Orleans. The French people in the Crescent City always make a trip to the track a family picnic. They go in family groups. These usually are composed of at least three generations.

"BOB QUINN and Judge Fuchs have done a great deal to encourage boys to attend ball games. The youngsters are admitted free and take home as souvenirs what baseballs are batted into their midst.

"In the days of long ago, I spent many hours standing on a knoll in front of the Tufts Dental School watching the scores and the Old Huntington ave. grounds or looking through a knot hole in one of the fences at the Walpols st. grounds.

"A BALL batted over the fence was as good as an admission ticket when turned in at the gate. If one were lucky enough to get a job helping to sweep the bleachers and stands in the morning, he was also a privileged guest of the management.

"LARRY (Big Boy) RAWSON, who tosses his tremendous punches at Ralph Smith at an Arena Club show on next Monday night, has had a career which reminds one a lot of that of Ruth. Larry got his schooling at the Working Boy's Home in Newton. He engaged in all branches of athletics, but had a particular liking for boxing.

"As a boxer, Rawson is as natural a puncher as Ruth is a hitter in baseball. Big Boy hits straight. His blows do not travel more than a foot or two. As a result, there is tremendous power behind them, while it is difficult for an opponent to get out of the way of his socks.

"Rawson's knockout of Joe Monte was one of the most spectacular ever scored in this city. Big Boy tells me the Brockton warrior nailed him with a peach of a right-hander on the chin before he was able to land a wallop himself.

"It was some minutes after the bout before Monte was able to leave the ring. It was necessary to trent Joe for two hours in his dressing room, as he suffered a slight concussion.

"Ralph Smith gave Young Stribling plenty of trouble, while he has boxed with Dempsey in private sparring bouts and on the stage. He will find that Rawson hits better than Stribling and almost as hard as Dempsey.

"THE ten-round semifinal between Hy Diamond and Charley Parker at the Arena on Monday night proves the value of a natural local attraction. This match has created all kinds of interest among the followers of these local boys. When they met recently, Diamond won a questionable decision at the end of eight rounds. The two extra rounds on Monday night should enable the rival warriors to prove which is the better man.

"DICK RUSSELL informs me Jake Zeramby is fit for his 10-round setto with Newport Johnny Brown at an open-air show at Lynn on Monday night. All Dick asks is a little warm weather to go with the red-hot action which Zeramby and Broten promise."

Champion Captures Six of Ten Rounds

By JACK CONWAY

TOMMY LOUGHRAN was obliged to call upon all of his fighting reserve in order to gain the decision over Ernie Schaaf in a bruising 10-round battle at the Boston Garden.

Schaaf was a hero in defeat. The Fighting Viking gave the best exhibition of battling of his entire career.

He matched left hands with Loughran, the master, and at times he had the best of the argument.

Loughran won six rounds, Schaaf two, while two were even.

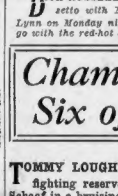
Loughran's superior skill and speed kept him out front, but at no time could he afford to take things easy. Schaaf carrying the fight of Flaming Youth, was at all times pressing forward in an effort to gain the margin.



Jack Conway

In some of his Boston bouts where he has gained the decision Schaaf has left the ring to the crowd booed. At the end of his tussle with Loughran, he was a hero with the crowd. He had displayed real fighting mettle against the world's light heavyweight champion.

SCHAAF furnished the big thrill of the fight in the fourth round. Up to that point in the tussle Loughran had piled up a big lead as a result of a steady bombardment of left hands.

Schaaf swept forward in the fourth frame intent upon turning the tide of battle in his favor. Suddenly he let drive with a left hook. Before Loughran could pull back, the blow crashed to his chin. The champion reeled backwards against the ropes. For a second he was groggy, then rallied.

The crowd was in an uproar as Schaaf rallied and smashed his right to the chin. He then sent another left hook to the jaw, but Loughran pulled away and the blow whizzed to Tommy's chest.

LOUGHRAN'S left-hand attack gave him the first three rounds. In the second frame, he followed a left hook with two rights to the head. One of the right hand blows opened a wound over Ernie's left eye.

Loughran took the honors in the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds. The ninth was even, while Schaaf's desperate rally gave him the margin in the tenth.

JUST before the main bout, a radiotone golf portrait of Tex Rickard was unveiled with fitting ceremonies. Mrs. Maxine Rickard, widow of the famous promoter, attended the unveiling.

HARRY SMITH of New York looked like a million dollars as he knocked out Garry Lesch of Syracuse in a round.

Yale Picked to Beat Harvard on Track

Yale is favored to come out on top in the struggle.

Harvard has not won a track meet from Yale in the Bowl since 1915, and the Blue figures that the home string of wins will remain unbroken.

Sid Kieselhorst, Yale century and low hurdle flash, is the class of the field in his events, though Tupper of Harvard, who has raced over the low sticks in very fast time, is a formidable rival.

O'CONNELL READY

Charley Engle will be counted upon to win the 220 flat race. Tom Mason of Harvard, who won both the 100 and 220 in the meet with Dartmouth, is fast enough to get a second in the furlong, unless Engle is off his mark in which case Mason could win.

Mason should gather a point or two in the 100. At Harvard, he has not been up to the standard of his work of a year ago, due to lack of practice. He should place high in the century for a second place.

In the high hurdles Frank Marduller of Harvard, who was injured this spring and has not had much training, should get a third. Marduller improved a lot in the last year though, and can battle all the way.

Cummings of the Crimson is fit to win the quarter, although Yale has several fast men in this race.

In the meet with Dartmouth Cummings lost a bit of drive in the home stretch of the quarter and was beaten by Swope. Cummings was carefully coached during the last week by Eddie Farrell and the Harvard coach feels that Frank can come through.

MUCH DEPENDS ON COBB

A lot depends on the work of Dave Cobb of Harvard in the half. Cobb, a sophomore, can hit about 1:58 or maybe a bit better in the event.

He has a lot of stamina and heart and can earn a flock of freshman laurels for himself with a win.

Capt. Jim Reid of the Crimson and Jim Wildes, running the final race for Harvard against Yale, face a fine pair in Smith and O'Brien of Yale.

Neither of the Harvard men can be even a trifle off form and hope to win. If Reid and Wildes be practice, fine though it is, of coaching the teammates and runs his own race, he can win for Harvard.

Jim may, however, elect to save himself for a try for first in the two-mile, twice run. Jim is a flashy man, he has a somewhat better chance of picking up a few points for Harvard.

Sturdy in the pole vault and Conlin in the hammer are favored to win their events for Yale.

Roxbury Nines to Battle Tomorrow

The Eagle C. C. of Roxbury will cross bats with the St. John's C. N. S. of Roxbury at the J. J. Connally Park, Marcella st., Roxbury on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Price and Caterious will be the battery for the Eagles.

The graceful figure at Steve's left was too much of a handicap for the champion and he was defeated both in form and time. (Associated Press photo.)

HENLEY RACE HAS 37 ENTRIES

Philadelphia, May 25 (AP)—Thirty-seven crews, representing the leading colleges and rowing clubs of the East, awaited the starter's gun today for the annual American Henley regatta on the Schuylkill river course

Five of the best 150-pound college crews in the country were ready to start in the race for the Joe Wright trophy, one of the features of the 11-event program. They are Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Yale and Pennsylvania.

Columbia ruled the favorite because of its victory over Yale and Pennsylvania in the regatta at Derby Ct., several weeks ago. Princeton and Harvard also have powerful eights and were expected to make a strong bid for victory.

Navy, Princeton and Pennsylvania were the entries in the event for the college freshmen eights; Pennsylvania and Princeton in the junior varsity eight-oared race, and Princeton, Yale, Harvard and Pennsylvania in the third varsity.

Four schoolboy eights were listed for the interscholastic event, with the Kent school of New England the favorite. The others were Hun school of Princeton and the Germantown academy and the Catholic high school of this city.

Leads Track Team

Northfield, Vt., May 25—Gardner Buck of Northfield, a Norwich senior, today was elected captain of the Norwich track team to succeed Arnold Wiggin of Portsmouth, N. H., who recently decided to quit the sport. Buck is a sprinter and broad jumper.

Maine Is Favorite To Win N.E. Title

WITH 19 qualifiers for New England track honors, University of Maine is figured by many experts as winner today, when the meet enters its final stages. The Orono boys have strong opposition in Holy Cross, qualifying 12, and Brown with nine making the grade.

Frank Harkins, president of the Boston College Student A. A., runs his last race for the Maroon and Gold when he faces the starter's gun in the two-mile run at Tech Field today.

This is one reason why Coach Ryder is expecting points in the two-mile event. Harkins is one of the most courageous runners ever at B. C. He hasn't the wind and legs of some of his superiors but he doesn't shrink from anyone as regards "heart."

On the first day of the meet the sprinters did not make fast time because of the wind, but James L. Daley of Holy Cross showed he again is stepping at a fast clip by winning his heat handily, and repeating with another romp in the 220-yard trials.

There were several outstanding athletes. Daley and George Morin of Holy Cross shone in the sprints while Arnold E. Noyes of New Hampshire, after running a quarter-mile in 50 seconds returned later to qualify for the half mile by winning his heat.

Edward Flanagan of Holy Cross qualified in three events, the hammer, shot put and discus, while C. E. O'Connor of Maine qualified in the high jump and broad jump.

The 100-yard dash found three going as expected only Birknell of Boston University of the favored ones being shut out. The best time was 10 2-5 seconds made by Sullivan's two Holy Cross stars in the 220-yard dash there were no upsets.

THERE was some fast running in the quarter-mile. Harold Klumbach of Holy Cross winning his heat in 50 seconds, as did Noyes of New Hampshire. John Wood, worth of Boston College showed a good flight of speed winning his heat in 50 4-5 seconds. The fourth heat was won by Spen, of Northeastern, the Eastern Intercollegiate champion in 52 2-5 seconds. The double fuchsmen had the wind with them on the long stretch to the turn.

Russell Chapman of Bates looked like the best of the half-mile runners, capturing the first heat with plenty in reserve in 2m 4s. None of New Hampshire won the second heat in 2m 1 4-5 seconds and C. W. Thompson of Northeastern captured the third heat in the fastest time, 2m 1 2-5 seconds.

SONNY'S CAMP DENIES HE HAS GONE STALE

Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, was to train publicly at Kelley & Hayes' Gym at 7:30 today for his finish match with Marin Plestina, famous Finnish hurler, to be held in the Arena Tuesday night.

Something of a row has followed a chestnut that all over New England in the past two weeks feels that he should polish up a few holds before stepping on the mat with Plestina despite the fact that he is on the verge of staleness from his tremendous campaign in all parts of the country.

Perkins, his chief conditioner, will work out with Farmer George Mellerup and Dan Koloff, Sonnenberg's estranged sparring partner, at Toland's Gymnasium at 1 o'clock. The huge challenger, 235 pounds of man, has been drawing huge throngs to Toland's shrine of sweat, and has kicked up a cloud of interest in the coming bout.

The challenger is a steady favorite to down Sonnenberg. His impressive showing 10 days ago, when he hammered Freddie Meyers, Andy Lawrence and Sam Skorosky in defeat within nine minutes, has sent his stock soaring above that of Sonnenberg, and apparently the whole of New England is fearfully expecting the title to change hands Tuesday night.

OPENING BIKE RACES TONIGHT

The 1929 bike season will get under way tonight at the Revere Cycle Track with four sixty starters in the 25 mile classic part Frankie Kernan of Revere, George Chapman, Newark speedster, Dan Piccinne from Providence and Frank Durberg of Cranes make up the quartet.

A special sprint feature of three two-and-one-half miles will find Chick Meyers, Jackie Luylon and George Cameron, Jr., on the starting mark. In addition there will be preliminary races for amateurs and professionals.

SARAH PALFREY WINS TITLE

Dazzling her opponent by a lightning like exhibition of tennis, Sarah Palfrey of Boston, today won the Massachusetts State women's tennis championship by defeating in straight sets Mrs. Henry R. Guild, formerly Miss Marion Bryant of Short Hills, N. J., at the Longwood Cricket Club. The score was 6-0, 6-1.

Miss Palfrey played almost perfect tennis in winning the final match of the State tournament from Mrs. Guild at the Brookline Country Club.

The youthful Bay State tennis star swept into the final round by defeating Miss Virginia Rice, also in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4.

Ruel Seeks to Plead in Supreme Court

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Harold (Muddy) Ruel, former backstop of the Washington baseball club, on Monday will ask to be permitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Ruel, for years an outstanding ball player, is a member of a law firm in St. Louis, where he is active in his profession when not playing baseball.

He qualifies for admission to the bar of the highest court by having practiced before the courts of Missouri for more than three years and looking forward, when his ball playing days are over, to the argument of constitutional questions before a nine black robed umpire who wear no masks or chest protectors.

MILLER HUGGINS is the tiny individual, who may be frothing at the mouth, if you happen to peer into the Yank dugout—Miller's sluggers are hitting like the married men at the Sunday school picnic—and the Connie Mack's are chortling away out in front—early for chortling, but it's a good thing to do whenever there's a chance—college boys working harder today than ever they do in a classroom—all for the best; if they became geniuses they would be smacked by the Treasury Dept.—any college coach knows why it takes the boys four years to get any kind of a degree—Bill Dinneen likes to call in Boston; the fans don't like the way he calls some of 'em—city inspectors are entitled to passes, to watch the Sox and Braves building—easy enough for handsome athlete to make hit on ladies' day—but not the right kind of a blow.

Arlington Wins Mystic Track Meet

Arlington high school annexed another title by easily winning the Mystic Valley interscholastic track championship on the Spy Pond Athletic Field.

Arlington rolled up 45 4-5 points while Winchester had to be satisfied with 10 4-5 points; Melrose with 9 3-5, Watertown with 8 4-5, and Wakefield high two points. Woburn failed to score.

Miss Helen Wills and Hunter dispelled some of the gloom among the American spectators later in the afternoon by defeating Jacques Brugnon and Mme. Mathieu 6-2, 6-3 in the quarter finals of the mixed doubles.

EX-REPORTER HERE TO AID BUSINESS

By FRANK H. MELDON
Financial Editor

Julian B. Foster, U. S. Commerce Department trade commissioner at Wellington, New Zealand, is in Boston to help business men get facts regarding foreign trade possibilities. Foster, a former newspaper reporter, was a guest of Harvey A. Sweetser, New England district manager of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and domestic Commerce. The bureau's headquarters are at 1801 Customhouse.

Julian B. Foster

Among the comment on the decision of Calumet & Hecla stockholders to keep the company's main office in Boston we find one declaring: "Sentiment was strongly evenly divided, as shown by the vote. This statement was based on the idea that the affirmative vote was by numbers of holders rather than on numbers of shares held. This seems error corrected by considerable comment printed regarding the annual meeting of Standard Oil of Indiana in which the Rockefeller forces ousted Col. Stewart from leadership, although numerically outnumbered.

* * *

Nearly 60 years ago steam-driven street cars were run in streets between Quincy and Boston over what was nicknamed "the Dummy Line." The use of steam as a motive power was abandoned because it frightened the horses. Today the New England Utility News, discussing buses, says: "The latest experiment has been in the substitution of a steam engine for the gasoline engine as a means of propulsion. A six-wheel motor bus, seating 50 passengers, has been built with an eight-cylinder steam engine to drive it, through worm gearing, when connected to the rear axis without interposition of clutch or gear change. As the engine is small the entire steam engine provides power for the operation of the electric generator to run the headlights, horns and air compressor and furnish lights. Fuel oil is used, to operate steam.

* * *

"Years ago, one of the fastest and most thrilling running events on the market was steam-driven. This new experiment, while following the engineering principles of the older automobile, is expected to provide a much more efficient unit with greater silence, comfort and less operating expense."

* * *

Warren S. Thompson, research worker, who addressed New England Credit men yesterday, pointed out that in the 70 years since 1859 our population increased to about four times its number in that period. In the next 70 years, according to expectations of the research workers, it will increase 50 per cent, that is, to about 185.8 millions, unless there is a very radical change in the present tendencies in the birth rate and unless our immigration policy is fundamentally altered.

* * *

"We stand on the threshold of a new era of population growth. The changes, both in rate of growth and in size and in the occupational distribution of our population, are going to be profound. If our industrial system is to continue to be efficient and profitable, it must adjust itself to these new trends in population growth just as it must adjust itself to new sources of power, new mechanical inventions, and new labor supplies.

* * *

"The most striking effect of an increase of only 50 per cent in numbers during the next 70 years as compared with an increase of 100 per cent in the past 70 years is that customers will be relatively scarcer than they have been in the past. Even the population is growing by leaps and bounds, markets are expanding in the same way, provided there is no overproduction resulting in declining standards of living.

* * *

"It is hard to overestimate the effect of a rapidly growing consumption upon production. The actual increase in customers, the confidence in steady growth of the country, and the improvement in the productivity of man's labor, resulting in an increase in average purchasing power have all co-operated to make the demand for goods expand at a rate never before dreamed of.

* * *

"Whereas increase in numbers and increase in individual purchasing power have worked together in the past to stimulate markets; in the future, increase in individual purchasing power must bear the brunt of industrial expansion. There is no doubt in my mind that the desire to purchase more goods at present in most of us so that we could clear the market of what we could be produced if we had the means. But there is some doubt whether we can reasonably expect such a rapid increase in individual purchasing power in the future that we shall not very seriously miss the rapid increase in numbers we have grown accustomed to in times past."

* * *

United Business Service of Boston says today: "While no evidences of a slackening in automobile output have appeared as yet, it is generally believed that curtailment is near at hand. Competition is extremely keen and profit margins are narrower than last year. Consequently, earnings have not expanded proportionately with the increase in production, and this probably accounts for the poor showing made by automobile shares in the face of record breaking volume of sales this year.

* * *

"Demand for planes has far outstripped the industry's ability to produce and for this reason practically every company in the field is experiencing enormous expansion of almost boom proportions. Many small and relatively unimportant manufacturing units are prospering now and will probably continue to benefit for some months to come as the result of the publication on the part of many to extend production facilities in this stage of development when frequent and radical changes in design are likely.

* * *

"Over the next year or so many will fall by the wayside and to become prosperous the shares representing these companies, we advise that commitments be confined to those large, well managed, and adequately financed enterprises."

* * *

Walter H. Paige, formerly superintendent of Maverick Mill, has been appointed by the directors of the York Manufacturing Company, succeeding the late Earl L. Richards, who died May 3.

* * *

As of May 10, 1929, Charles F. Guild retires from the firm of Townsend, Anthony & Tyson.

* * *

As of May 21, of the outstanding $4,500,000, 10-year, 5 per cent debentures of the United Investing Corporation, $3,901,000 have been presented to the trustees for conversion into common stock warrants and 39,010 shares of common stock delivered.

* * *

The exchange is advised that the Sterling Securities Corporation is to retire its preferred dividend certificates on June 15, and preferred and class "A" shares which such certificates represent will be deliverable to holders.

* * *

Certain pools and individuals have been hard hit by the recent decline. One trader in a Wall Street house sold out at a loss of $300,000. Calls Inland Waterways Waste of Taxpayers' Money

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, May '25—Are further heavy public expenditures on the developments of inland waterways justifiable?

Taxpayers of New York State would save $4,500,000 a year if, instead of maintaining the Barge Canal, they had paid the railroads to carry all the freight it handled—and the shipper would have had his freight carried free.

These statements come from E. F. Loomis, president of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, as comments on what recently happened in this column when the writer visited Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis and other centers keenly interested in the development of transportation facilities on the Mississippi and its tributaries. The Lehigh head alleged claimed for planned developments were then presented. Mr. Loomis gives the other side of the picture.

B. C. Forbes

The whole question affects your pocket and mine.

After remarking that the advocates of the popular proposals have hardly been done all the talking without contradiction, Mr. Loomis states, in part:

"In the days of George Washington, before we had railroads, good highways and motor cars, there was an urgent need for artificial waterway development, but with the transportation facilities available today, and with the railroads able to handle a considerable increase in their present traffic, there seems no reason to resort to the methods of ha time. Yet advocates of inland waterways continue to urge the expenditure of additional millions.

"When inland waterway transportation results in a combined cost to the shipping and taxpaying public greater than would be the cost of transportation by rail, the public is the loser. This is true of the existing New York State Barge Canal closed five months of the year because of ice; it is true of the Barge line now being operated by the Government on the Mississippi and Warrior rivers, and doubtless it will be true of the proposed St. Lawrence waterway development.

"The New York State Barge Canal has cost the taxpayers more than $270,000,000. It was expected to handle 20,000,000 tons a year. Last year there were but 3,000,000 tons handled in more than 3,000,000 tons. There

"Demand for planes has far outstripped the industry's ability to produce and for this reason practically every company in the field is experiencing enormous expansion of almost boom proportions. Many small and relatively unimportant manufacturing units are prospering now and will probably continue to benefit for some months to come as the result of the publication on the part of many to extend production facilities in this stage of development when frequent and radical changes in design are likely.

* * *

"Over the next year or so many will fall by the wayside and to become prosperous the shares representing these companies, we advise that commitments be confined to those large, well managed, and adequately financed enterprises."

* * *

Walter H. Paige, formerly superintendent of Maverick Mill, has been appointed by the directors of the York Manufacturing Company, succeeding the late Earl L. Richards, who died May 3.

As of May 10, 1929, Charles F. Guild retires from the firm of Townsend, Anthony & Tyson.

As of May 21, of the outstanding $4,500,000, 10-year, 5 per cent debentures of the United Investing Corporation, $3,901,000 have been presented to the trustees for conversion into common stock warrants and 39,010 shares of common stock delivered.

The exchange is advised that the Sterling Securities Corporation is to retire its preferred dividend certificates on June 15, and preferred and class "A" shares which such certificates represent will be deliverable to holders.

Reports of losses by pools range from $150,000 to $15,000,000. Professional bears have "cleaned up" millions on the decline as principal Wall Street beneficiaries of reserve board policies. is not a railroad operating between Buffalo and New York which could not have handled this entire traffic without disturbing its normal business.

"The canal costs the taxpayers of New York State nearly $11,000,000 a year. The railroads not only lose this traffic, but see part of their $20,000,000 annual tax payments go toward paying interest and bonds and for the upkeep of the canal. Just who gets the benefit of this canal at the expense of taxpayers?

"As an indication of the economic fallacy of a canal as a transportation agency, the people of New York would have saved approximately $4,500,000 annually if all the freight had been handled by railroads with the state paying the charges and the shippers would have saved some $3,000,000

"The only possible justification for the Erie Barge canal would be cheaper transportation to reach foreign markets, particularly for American products. Considerable farm lands are approaching maximum production, our population is increasing and probably by the time the waterway could be ready we would have no grain to export. Then, too, a large part of the savings claimed for planned developments were then presented. Mr. Loomis gives the other side of the picture.

"Our wheat exports from Gulf of Mexico ports run from 150,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels a year. Would not this wheat have to compete in Liverpool with Canadian wheat brought via St. Lawrence? And how would this new competition affect the price of Southwestern wheat?

"The plans for further development of the Mississippi-Warrior system are even more questionable. The federal barge line is called a success because it seems to demonstrate that private capital can profitably engage in inland waterway transportation. Although it has lost heavily, political expediency apparently does not permit its discontinuance.

"Direct expenditures on these natural waterways, including tributaries, aggregate $600,000,000. But since 1920 the Mississippi-Warrior Barge Line, owned and operated by the government, has carried about 7,775,000 tons, at an average annual loss of approximately $440,000

"American railroads do not object to any form of transportation economically justified and in the public interest. But there is no place in our economic structure for a transportation service which, unable to bear its proper share of costs, relies upon a subsidy which we must all pay.

In this reasoning sound or unsound?

DOLLAR TRADE VOLUME OFF FOR WEEK

Commercial transactions during the week ended May 18, as reflected by check payments, were lower than in either the preceding week or the corresponding period of 1928, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce. Steel plants were more active than in either the previous week or the corresponding period a year ago

Crude petroleum output for the latest reported week showed a decline from the previous period but was greater than last year; the output of bituminous coal showed gains over both periods Lumber production was likewise larger than in either the previous week or the same week of 1928

The primary distribution of goods, as reflected by loadings of freight cars covering the latest reported week, was substantially higher than a year ago.

The general index of wholesale prices showed a fractional gain over the previous week but was about four per cent lower than a year ago. Iron and steel prices declined further gains as compared with both the preceding week and the same period of last year.

Cotton prices were higher than in the previous week but lower than a year ago. Wheat prices were considerably lower than last year. Loans and discounts of Federal reserve member banks showed a fractional increase over the preceding week and were higher also than a year ago. Interest rates on call loans averaged lower than in the previous week but were higher than a year ago.

Time-money rates averaged higher than in either period. Prices of stocks and bonds were lower than in the previous week but were higher than a year ago. Bond prices were lower than in either period. Business failures were more numerous than a year ago.

Hog receipts and receipts of wheat and cotton during the week ended May 11 were lower than a year ago. Cattle receipts, however were slightly higher than last year

MONEY 'CLUB' SWINGING IS OPPOSED

By M. L. RAMSAY.

Washington, May 25.—Rediscount rate increases, whose shadow has hovered for days over the stock market, and to some extent over business throughout the country, will be held in abeyance, according to latest reports.

In best informed official quarters it was learned yesterday that there is strong and determined opposition in the Federal Reserve Board to authorizing any increases. Contrary to widely circulated reports, there is understood to be no general sentiment, with the board in favor of higher rates.

At the same time the dominance of the low rate faction was widely illustrated when a proposed increase of the Chicago Reserve bank's rate to 5 per cent was shut off without discussion. The Chicago directors met and, according to reports which appeared publicly, unauthoritative, asked for the increase.

Instead of formally refusing it, as the board is reported to have done a number of times in recent weeks, the board held a meeting at which it could be considered

Moreover, the long and mysterious meeting Thursday, made more piquant by the presence of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, over whether the New York rate should be advanced

Governor Young and members would say nothing about exact alignment on the New York rate issue, if it was as far as alignment. But it was made plain, in quarters extremely well posted, that Secretary Mellon did not attend because of a distress call.

Much of the meeting was devoted to the problem of providing extra help in 35 reserve banks and branches for the huge but undramatic task of counting and sorting billions of dollars of new currency.

BONDS LOWER ON BIG BOARD

New York, May 25 (AP)—The sagging bond market found no respite in today's short session, and quotations based on the early trading showed a preponderance of minus signs as demand touched the minimum of the week. A belief that tighter money was in prospect kept both purchasers and sellers out of the market, and transactions were small.

Some of the better grade rails which suffered yesterday apparently appeared attractive to a few investors, for losses were recovered, notably in the Canadian National 4½s and Hydraware & Hudson refunding 4s made up a point, while in the speculative group Seaboard Air Line 4s were buying that advanced the price a point.

COTTON MIXED IN NEW YORK

New York, May 25 (AP)—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 10 to 18 points and sold about 6 to 13 points net lower in early trading under further liquidation and local forced selling. Offerings were comparatively light, and the market steadied after reports of the weather map which showed showers in western and central belts, while barometric readings indicated good possibility they would work eastward over Sunday.

CHAPTER 12.

HER dark eyes seemed to be probing the past. A tragic past, to judge from her expression. Don Carlos broke the silence.

"I beg your pardon. I spoke hastily."

"But I want you to know—you, who think that romance no longer lives in these far islands, that I dare not venture no longer beckons to us, and perhaps when I have told you I may little tale you may think otherwise. As yet they have made no appeal to you. Did I not overhear your remarks that afternoon?"

"An appeal of beauty, Eugenie Nahuil, yes?"

"You are skeptical, my friend. Life in the vast world outside throws sawdust in your eyes. But who shall deny me when I say it creates illusions only for you? Here in this isolated spot primitive strains still live, although your American customs and wealth now seek to blot out the ancient heritage.

"No! I cannot carry on. I am only clouding the issue for you with my words. He—my husband—told me that I dare not tell you the truth; that I would suffer, and I did. But I cannot let him wreck your life as he has mine and those related to me. I must tell you, I must."

Careful was he in his choice of words. This woman had moved him strangely, as no other woman had before, but he must not let the beauty of herself and the beauty of the night rob him of his common sense. There was something here he did not understand. Could it be a trap?

"I would tell you that my husband, David Nahuil, and his cursed ring of opium smugglers have you in their net. They are forcing you to carry the vile stuff to ports places as they indicate. Just what hold they have over you I cannot say. But they shall not ruin your life, as they have mine. There is something fine about you; I saw it that day I saw you standing in the bright light before Ah Fong. They shall not break you, as they have broken me."

He grasped her arm and shook it.

"What is it you are trying to tell me? That I have been taken in by a gang of opium smugglers? Tell me the truth! What is your connection with it? Tell me. I won't be lied to this time. David Nahuil told me that it was only a matter of political interests between Orientals and the Polynesians and that no harm could come of it. I was seeking excitement, pleasure. Who do you know of his movements?"

What Has Happened So Far

Don Carlos Whiting goes to Hawaii after he discovers that his wife, Eve, is carrying on an affair with George Phillips, a neighbor. On landing he is accosted by David Nahuil, who offers him $2000 for delivering a black bag. He sees Eugenie, who fascinates him. Phillips carries on his suit for Eve's love, but quarreling brings unhappiness. Don Carlos meets Selma Wilson, crippled mother of an unusual family, which includes a daughter, Ruth. The latter plans a companionate marriage with Al Harding, much to the disgust of her father, Big Tim Wilson. A woman drops a letter at Don's feet. It contains an invitation to meet her. The same day Nahuil orders him to carry the black bag again. He delivers the package and arrives home in safety. The night for his meeting arrives, and he learns that Eugenie is Nahuil's wife, the same one he had seen when he first carried the bag for Nahuil.

(New Go On With the Story)

art is lying. He has lied to me the five years I have been married to him; every moment of the day. I tried to stop him from ruining you, as he has me, that day you first came to River street. He has broken my life and the life of my father, before me. That is the hold he had over me— an early escapade of my father's which could have landed him in prison.

"Have you ever seen the inside of a prison, my friend? If you have you know that I was willing to sacrifice anything, myself even, for the sake of my father. My father was my idol—my god—through all the years of my childhood. But you, my friend—what is the hold David Nahuil has over you that he could force you to become an agent in this cursed traffic? A traffic that ruins men's bodies and souls. You seem so fine—it is so hard to believe you are not."

"Good Lord! You don't imagine that I knew I was carrying opium, do you?"

"How was I to know otherwise? My friend, you are very naive. Do you not understand that silence is not only part of you, you can play? As I have played it for five years?"

"But something must be done. Surely the authorities—"

"They know nothing about it. Only the pawns of fate—such as myself and my father—know of the misdeeds of those evil minds who prey on the weaknesses of men. We are very necessary—those of us who have made mistakes in life. One must always pay, somehow.

"This is monstrous; terrible! What a tragedy it must have been for you—to be wedded to a member of an alien race—because of duty and fear!"

What a play—a book—what unlimited vistas for the imagination to play in! Was it for this reason she had come into his life—this strange child of the ancients of society, black eyes—eyes as deep as black pools as night.

He stood speaking:

"I did not know, at first, that I needed pity. David was a Haweiled god, bronzed as some statue executed in precious metal; reckless, daring. In the beginning, aloof from the strictures of society, I did not mind. Down in this crossroads of the Pacific many strange bloods intermingle. Certain people have always accepted me. The others—they did not matter. For time, at least?

"What was the price I had to pay. But the years brought their burden of misery. The opium ring became more and more greedy for the huge sums they offered, he lost even the small degree of decency with which he was born. I have seen him grow into a vicious character; of late, he has taken to the drugs in which he trafficks. I fear him; what he may do to me.

"He has bought me! I am the price of his silence. I think he has been often consumed with the desire to betray my feeble self.

"Some time, my friend, I shall tell you more about it. But tonight—night! I am weary. So, if you do not mind—"

His mind kept reverting to her. He thought of her, sitting alone atop Tantalus.

A black-eyed goddess living on Olympus. The blackness of her eyes—eyes as black as the depths of a pool at night....

A SIX-DAY STORY

peremptory. He was in Philadelphia and was coming into New York at 8 o'clock that night. Would she meet him at the train and have a bite of food with him? There was something important that he had to tell her.

When they were facing each other across a tiny table in a popular grill and a waiter had taken their order Jimmy drew a letter from his pocket and showed it to her. It was from Vina announcing that she would arrive on the 7:30 train.

"And you feel—you feel, in duty bound—" Kitty's voice broke. She couldn't speak any further.

She nodded miserably. "I love you, Kitty. But right along, I've felt I wasn't playing the game with either you—or Vina."

With a little rush she was kissing her parents. Jimmie drew nearer.

He heard Vina exclaim, with an excited giggle: "Oh, mother!—oh, dad—I've been and gone and done it—don't be angry—I'm so happy!"

—then, pushing forward a dark-eyed foreigner who accompanied her—there's Beppo, my husband—just before we left Italy I married him—he's the most wonderful man on the earth!"

It was typical of Jimmie that in his own almighty relief at this unexpected solution of his difficulties —and Kitty's—he should feel no anger against Vina for what others might call her perfidy or her deception.

He went straight into the first telephone booth he saw. He felt a great urge to call up Kitty!

"Vina, Jimmie," cried Kitty when he appeared.

The autumn days were happy days for Kitty Grayson.

She saw Jimmie practically every evening. And the more she was with him, and the better she got to know and understand his character, the more her love strengthened.

He met her outside her office one evening, in highest spirits.

"I've a letter from the head of a big automobile concern about my carburetor. He's crazy about it. He's made me an offer. Let's celebrate."

At dinner he confided that he'd decided to manufacture the carburetor himself.

"But—where on earth would you get the money, Jimmie? Would the auto company give you an advance, or what?"

"The bank would lend me the money," he said quickly. "Oh, I haven't been sleeping in the last couple of weeks! Ever since Vina's glad news released me and gave you to me,"—he squeezed Kitty's fingers under the table—"I've been planning and scheming. I've prowled around till I found an old barn and I'm going to rent it, fix it up to my fit, cheap, and turn it into a small factory. We'll have that little angel—thousands of 'em —turned out to my pattern in no time!"

* * *

It was that very evening that John Grayson died. It was a bitter blow for both Mrs. Grayson and Kitty, though they bore up bravely.

He left practically nothing except a small insurance. It became evident they could not stay where they were. The doctor, who had attended the husband, now advised a short trip for the widow, recommending an inexpensive boarding house among the pines of North Carolina where she could regain her failing health.

* * *

The weeks went by. Irma—on some pretext or other and usually because of an assumed interest in Jimmie's welfare—dropped in often —contrived to see Jimmie fairly frequently.

She hated Kitty. Was just biding her time to do her an ill turn . . . loosing over the thought that, if the worst came to the worst, she had a trump card up her sleeve . . . and she would play it.

She would tell Jimmie about the time Kitty had drunk the cocktails and spent the night at Shady Grove alone with Frank Hinkler.

The plant had been operating for close on three months and Kitty had a job down South in order to be near and nurse her mother when Jimmie appeared one evening at Irma's apartment, looking white and exhausted. They had a strike at the factory, and the data for deliveries had to be set back.

"You mean you may not make deliveries on time? Is that what you're afraid of, Jimmie?" With a swift, panther-like movement Irma had come up to him and slipped—to his utter astonishment and confusion—her long arms about him. She whispered, her hot breath on his cheek—"What does it matter. What does anything matter when you've got ME? I LOVE you, Jimmie."

"Good heavens! Have—have you taken leave of your senses? Irma!" he cried.

"It is true!" she was white with the emotion he had engendered in her.

"Sit down." He thrust her gently on the couch.

Jimmie nodded: "Why, you've surely known all along that Kitty Grayson is the girl—my girl—that, though I like you I hope to marry Kitty."

"You love her?" Irma spat out the question like the hiss of a rattler.

"I indeed I do," said Jimmie Barron simply, "with my whole heart."

"You do, do you?" Irma lips curled back from her teeth and she mimicked him. "That little trollop! That light-of-love!" She used the strongest epithet. "Why, she's no better than she should be—she's double-crossed you from the beginning! She spent a night with Frank Hinkler at his country place—just he and she"——

When he reached home he was cheered by a telegram from Kitty announcing her coming to New York and asking him to meet her.

"Forget it," said Jimmie.

"What do you know about this? That girl who used to be here, the Kitty Grayson you were quite chummy with, has up and beat us to it! She's to be married tomorrow!"

Irma turned sick with rage. Jane went on, blandly: "To that clever Baron Bellow—look at the picture of him . . . isn't he handsome? They say he'll make any amount of money with his new invention. But she was a good kid, and deserved what was coming to her."

Yes they would be married in a few hours now! Was it too late for her to do anything to prevent that union?

* * *

Not wanting Jane or anyone in the office to "listen in," she slipped on her hat and coat and ran down to the public telephone in the lower hall of the building.

"Hello? Hello? Stuyvesant 0014?" Then, as the connection was made, and the rumble of a man's tones sounded over the wire: "Is that you, Frank, dear? This is Irma."

"Is it indeed?" came the mocking answer. "One of his pretty sweeties, ain't you? Well, listen! 'Frank, dear' is arrested. Who are you?"

She waited to hear no more. The police were there! Frank Hinkler would be sent "up the river," and she must clear out of New York at once. No time was to be lost.

* * *

The strike ended and work went on apace in Jimmie's small factory. The big automobile concern was thoroughly satisfied with the delivery. They gave a second order, and a third . . . the factory had to be expanded.

The news of the carburetor soon was bruited about, so that orders came flocking in, and Kitty and Jimmie's prospects grew rosesta.

"With everything going so splendidly, and your mother strong enough to have you leave her why should we wait, when it would be so wonderful to be together? Why don't we marry, now, Kitty?"

"Happy, dear heart? This is a great day, Kitty—"

Elks' Chef Gives Demonstration

WOMEN from all over New England flocked Wednesday to the Martha Lee Kitchen to take advantage of a lesson on fancy cakes and pastries, given by Americo Cenci, pastry chef of the Elks Hotel, and they certainly were rewarded by an exceptionally valuable lesson. It was hard to believe that one of Boston's youngest chefs could have had training and experience sufficient to produce with such speed and efficiency such mouth-watering pastries in such interesting variety. We predict a wonderful future for Mr. Cenci with our finest hotels.

First Mr. Cenci prepared the paste for his eclairs, petit fours and cream puffs. You will probably want to halve this recipe, which makes a very considerable quantity. This formula calls for one pint of milk, ¾ pound of butter, ½ pound of bread flour and 10 eggs. The milk was brought to a boil with the butter. To this was added the half pound (2 cups) of bread flour, beating it in quickly and then the 10 eggs, adding two at a time. Halved, these quantities would not be extravagant.

The filling for these eclairs, cream puffs, etc., was made by scalding 1 qt. of milk. Meanwhile, 4 eggs, slightly beaten, were stirred up with 6 oz. sugar (¾ c.), 2 oz. of bread flour (4 tbspa.), 1 oz. of cornstarch (2 tbspa.). This was stirred into the hot milk until a smooth paste was formed, which was later flavored with a little vanilla. To fill the cream puffs, which were baked in a medium oven, Mr. Cenci made a hole in the side of each puff to be filled and put this filling through a pastry bag and small round tube.

The puff paste for the Napoleons was made with one pound of flour, one pound of butter, ½ pint of ice water and a pinch of salt. One-half of the butter was mixed in with the flour, water and salt. The remaining half-pound of butter was rolled into the pastry, a little at a time, in accordance with the directions previously given in this column. Six turns given to the pastry altogether, allowing it to chill from one-half to an hour between each rolling.

Mr. Cenci, of course, prepared his paste at the hotel, as time did not permit of its being made at our school. He rolled the chilled paste to fit the cookie sheets, and after letting it stand one-half hour, baked it in a hot oven. It was then cut into long strips, which were put together with the cream filling and decorated on top with white frosting, to which a knife dipped in chocolate was drawn in fancy designs.

The edges of the Napoleons were draped in cocoanut colored green, with vegetable coloring. Some of them were also decorated with the cream filling put through a pastry bag and lines of currant jelly. Never have I eaten more mouth-watering pastry.

Mr. Cenci's Fig Cream Pie had for its foundation a cake made with 4 ounces (1c.) of butter, 6 ounces (1c.) of sugar, 4 eggs, 8 ounces (4c.) of bread flour, a little orange flavoring, ½c. of milk and 1½ rounded tsps. baking powder. This cake was baked in two layers in a medium oven and put together with layers of whipped cream, in which finely-chopped preserved figs had been stirred.

The top layer of whipped cream and sugar was divided with the knife into serving portions on each of which ½ of a preserved fig was placed and leaves of whipped cream arranged for decorations, with a piping of whipped cream around the edge of this handsome pie.

For a decorating frosting, 1 egg white was stirred with enough confectioner's sugar to make stiff. One-half of this was colored green for decorating stems and leaves on the cakes, and the other half pink for the blossoms, which were made on the frosted Petit Fours.

The frosting for the Eclairs was made with 2 pounds of confectioner's sugar, ½c. of hot water, mixed thoroughly together and enough more sugar added until of the right consistency to pour. Vanilla flavoring was used (about 2 tsps.) and the frosting heated until lukewarm.

The cakes were arranged on a wire cake cooler and the frosting was poured from a saucepan, pouring first onto the tabis and then through one row of cakes, and then back again over the cakes, until they were entirely covered. The frosting is allowed to drip through onto the table, is scraped off with a spatula, and put back in the saucepan to be reheated.

It is necessary to keep the frosting comfortably warm in order to have it pour well. If it is made too thin, it will drip off the cakes, and if too thick it will not cover them. After the cakes are completely covered with white frosting, a portion of it was colored pink and put through the pastry bag in biaz lines on the Eclairs and in whirls on the Cream Puffs, some of which were covered with the pink frosting.

Then chocolate was added to the warm frosting and used to cover a portion of the small cakes and cream puffs which were later decorated with the blossoms and green leaves of the decorating frosting. Every one voted that this was an exceptionally beautiful collection of Petit Fours.

Time did not permit Mr. Cenci to prepare the fancy cookies and shortcakes which he had planned, but he kindly left the recipes for you. For the fancy cookies, 4 ounces of butter is used, with 4 ounces of sugar, 7 ounces of bread flour and a little lemon flavoring. For the shortcakes, ½-pound of pastry flour, ½-pound of bread flour, 2 ounces of butter, 1 egg, 1 ounce of baking powder, 2 ounces of sugar and ½-pint of milk. This was put together in the usual manner and baked in a moderately hot oven.

Our next Chef's Day, and the last of the season, will be in charge of our good friend, Mr. K. Camille Den Dooven and a capacity audience is confidently expected.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We are a crowd of girls and have parties quite often. We are not the type of girls that pet, but let a fellow take us around—that is all. We keep up conversations very well, in fact the fellows tell us so.

They come to our parties whenever we invite them and many times they leave dances and parties to come to ours. But what we want to ask is, why is it they never take us out like they do other girls? Is it because we do not pet?

We are not bad-looking girls. We are very jolly and always full of fun. We are good dancers.

Whenever they do see us at dances, they never dance with us but sometimes come over and talk to us. We thank you for your answer.

ANXIOUS PARTY.

NOT knowing personally either you girls or the young men you refer to, I cannot tell you why they do not invite you out or dance with you—there seems no reason, whatsoever, why they should not do so. Certainly it is ill-mannered of them to continually accept your hospitality, yet show you absolutely no attentions or consideration. If I were you, I would not ask them to parties quite so often. Not that you should be extreme, but with just a little indifference.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I read your column every day, and find you help me many. So I thought perhaps you might find time to give this matter some valuable advice.

Can there be a happy marriage between two who love each other dearly and are willing to give up homes and friends just to be with one another? You see, there is religious prejudice. They are of different religions.

There is no more to be said. I will be reading your column every day anxiously to see if you will tell us what to do. They say that love will find a way. Can it find a way to solve this problem?

PERPLEXED.

THERE is a right answer to every problem, Perplexed, and that right answer is best for all concerned.

In your case, much depends on your own viewpoint and that of your sweetheart. There have been ideally happy marriages between two of widely different religions and races. I have known such instances. But if you and the person you wish to marry are conservative and devout, and are in your innermost hearts convinced it would be wrong to marry one of another religious faith, then it would be wrong for you.

A marriage that violated your conscience could not make you happy. On the other hand, if you are both rather liberal, broad-minded, tolerant, without any desire to convert each other, and if you are united to each other in every other respect, you may be very happy indeed, in your marriage despite the differences in religions. All happiness to you both!

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

Tommy—Uncle Bill, that dime you gave me slipped through a hole in my pocket.

Uncle—Well, here's another one.

Tommy—Wouldn't a quarter be safer, Uncle Bill?

ALICE THOMPSON.
131 East Bow st., Franklin, N. H.

When he reached home he was cheered by a telegram from Kitty announcing her coming to New York and asking him to meet her.

He rushed to the Pennsylvania Station and forgot his desperation in the joy of seeing her again.

Over a late meal Jimmie told her the story of Irma and she explained to him the unfortunate incident at Hinkler's bungalow.

"Forget it," said Jimmie.

"What do you know about this? That girl who used to be here, the Kitty Grayson you were quite chummy with, has up and beat us to it! She's to be married tomorrow!"

Irma turned sick with rage. Jane went on, blandly: "To that clever Baron Bellow—look at the picture of him . . . isn't he handsome? They say he'll make any amount of money with his new invention. But she was a good kid, and deserved what was coming to her."

Yes they would be married in a few hours now! Was it too late for her to do anything to prevent that union?

* * *

Not wanting Jane or anyone in the office to "listen in," she slipped on her hat and coat and ran down to the public telephone in the lower hall of the building.

She gave Franks number in a voice that trembled.

"Hello? Hello? Stuyvesant 0014?" Then, as the connection was made, and the rumble of a man's tones sounded over the wire: "Is that you, Frank, dear? This is Irma."

"Is it indeed?" came the mocking answer. "One of his pretty sweeties, ain't you? Well, listen! 'Frank, dear' is arrested. Who are you?"

She waited to hear no more. The police were there! Frank Hinkler would be sent "up the river," and she must clear out of New York at once. No time was to be lost.

* * *

The strike ended and work went on apace in Jimmie's small factory. The big automobile concern was thoroughly satisfied with the delivery. They gave a second order, and a third . . . the factory had to be expanded.

The news of the carburetor soon was bruited about, so that orders came flocking in, and Kitty and Jimmie's prospects grew rosesta.

"With everything going so splendidly, and your mother strong enough to have you leave her why should we wait, when it would be so wonderful to be together? Why don't we marry, now, Kitty?"

Why not? There was nothing to hinder the happy couple.

"Happy, dear heart? This is a great day, Kitty—"

"Oh, Jimmie!" Mrs. Jimmie Barron put her cheek on his. She whispered, softly:—"I've got the man I love. And he loves me. The world could hold no greater happiness than that."

Forty Hours Devotion

Note the remarkable coincidence. When the photographer developed his picture he found a halo of church lights directly over the head of one of the little girls.

The children in the picture led the procession yesterday morning at the opening of the Forty Hours Devotion at St. Rose parish, Chelsea. The devotion will end tomorrow morning at solemn high mass preceded by another procession, with the children spreading flowers in front of them. This particular devotion is going on in some one of the Catholic churches every day in the year. The officers of the solemn service tomorrow will be: The Rev. Eugene A. Twomey, celebrant; Rev. Francis S. Keaney, deacon; Rev. Augustine S. Hargedon, sub-deacon, and Rev. Leonard A. McMahon, master of ceremonies. The Pope declared that he is always pleased to hear about the Knights of Columbus and of their wonderful work everywhere as well as in Boston.

SKYSCRAPERS' LIFE MAY BE 100 YEARS

The condition of the Tacoma building, Chicago's oldest skyscraper, examined as the wreckers razed the building, bears out the conclusions reached by the committee on depreciation and obsolescence of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, who recently completed a study of the life expectancies of various types of buildings and presented this study in report form. The useful life of a skyscraper was estimated by the committee at 40 years.

In reference to its conclusions on skyscrapers, on which duration of experience is insufficient to base a judgment as to actual physical life of these buildings, the report states, "So far as the construction of skyscrapers is concerned, it is perfectly possible that these buildings may be in excellent condition at the end of 50 or even 100 years, but it is unlikely that their period of economic usefulness can be much longer than 40 years."

The old Tacoma building proved to be as sound structurally on the day of its wreckage as it was on the day of its completion, but it must give way to a new 40-story structure.

Examination of the building when partially wrecked showed that there were no traces of rust or crystallization in the huge columns of the 14 story "old timer" and that the steel framework was in perfect condition, but its obsolescence in the matter of 1929 conveniences and the fact that it was too low to get a sufficient return on the exceedingly valuable land it occupied has ended its useful life.

4-Story Beacon St. Property in Sale

Henry C. Brookings has taken title to the property at 251 Beacon st., Boston, from Henry S. Rogerson. The property consists of 2240 square feet of land and a four-story brick building, the total assessed valuation of which is $21,500.

Buyer and seller were represented by Lombard Williams Co.

Brookline Ave. Salesroom Leased

Boston Sellers Kitchen, Inc., has taken, through Arthur P. Pearce, Jr., the entire store at 84 Brookline ave. from the Sunrise Sales Co. Premises will be used for the sale of kitchen cabinets.

OWNER GROUP TO MEET IN BOSTON

The 21st annual convention of the National Assn. of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Boston, June 25 to 28, will be the occasion of the first meeting of the property owners division, established, at the most recent meeting of the board of directors of the association, on the logical basis for associating the property owner and the realtor in their work of solving civic and economic problems.

Albert W. Swayne, chairman of the new division, will preside at the meeting, which will be held the forenoon of June 28. Subjects to be discussed include: "Why a Board Should Have a Property Owners' Division"; "The Three-way Plan for Property Owner Membership," and "What the National Property Owners' Division Can do for Its Membership."

The subject of property owner membership in real estate boards will not be confined to the meeting of the property owners' division, but will likewise come before the general session of the entire convention delegate body and will be discussed by the realtor secretaries in their division meetings.

Leonard Reaume, Detroit, a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will discuss property owner membership at a general convention session and Mr. Swayne, who is president of the Chicago Real Estate Board, where a strong property owner membership is forming, will speak before the realtor secretaries' division on ways in which property owner membership can be established in local real estate boards so that this membership can function effectively and, at the same time, not overlap its activities with certain phases of board work which are peculiarly the function of the realtor.

That the establishment of property owner divisions in local real estate boards has been felt as a community need is indicated by the great number of boards in which some basis of such membership is being formulated or contemplated since the action of the association at its mid-winter meeting in Birmingham, when the establishment of property owner membership in local boards was definitely approved and recommended to the local boards.

REALTORS WAIT TRIP TO HUB

The National Association of Real Estate Boards has sent a bulletin to all member boards outlining the entertainment program arranged for the realty convention to be held in Boston, June 25-28. The bulletin says:

"Historic Boston, modern Boston and Boston institutions, so much a tradition of the city as to be actually Boston, will combine forces in offering interests and entertainment for the visiting realtors and their feminine guests who will be in the Hub city for the 21st annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, June 25 to 28.

"The Boston 'Pops' orchestra, that band of internationally famous musicians, will have a special 'Realtor Night' at one of their pop concerts. Bostonians have developed the charming custom of serving light refreshments at these concerts and this delightful departure from American conventions in Boston, where American conventions have been wont to originate, will be a new experience for delegates from Chicago, St. Louis and most cities where even a pop concert is not accompanied by teas and lemonades.

HARBOR TRIP PLANNED

"A harbor trip with box suppers at Nantasket Beach is another characteristically Boston form of diversion which is to be enjoyed by the realtors, while convention sessions are holding the attention of delegates, the feminine guests will enjoy tea at Paul Revere's quaint old Wayside Inn, made famous by Longfellow's 'Tales of a Wayside Inn.'

"The old inn is about 25 miles distant from Boston. It is now owned by Henry Ford who has placed there a very interesting collection of early American furniture and other relics of colonial days and has restored the watermill, so that the inn has again its mellow charm which endeared it to Longfellow. Likewise, while delegates are convening and enjoying pleasure, the fair guests will view style shows at the Copley-Plaza and go on shopping expeditions.

"Both spectator and active sports fans will find events to add to their enjoyment of convention days. On the Monday before the official opening of the convention, arrangements have been made for the realtors to attend a boxing bout at National League park. On the opening day of the convention, an American League ball game is scheduled. Golf links within easy reach of the city, clubs and horseback riding along some of Boston's beautiful bridle paths will add to the pleasure of those who take their sports first hand only.

DINNER FOR PRESIDENTS

"Tuesday night, not all convention entertainment is planned for the special benefit of the ladies. The mortgage and finance division has arranged for a stag party and buffet supper to be given at the University Club.

"On the last evening of the convention the Boston Exchange will give a complimentary dinner for presidents of local boards, presidents of state associations and officers and directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"The Boston Exchange will be hosts at dances each evening of the convention at the Copley-Plaza or Statler Hotel, and will plan daily sight-seeing trips around the city. Arrangements are also made so that those who wish to take excursion trips to Campbell's, Plymouth, Concord and Lexington may do so."

FIRMS LEASE PROPERTIES

The Wagner Electric Co. of St Louis has taken space at 6-8 St James ave. from Joseph R. Innocents and John Sherry.

The estate of Thomas E. Proctor has leased for a term of years, space in the building at 661-667 Atlantic ave., to the Commercial Service Bureau, Inc.

Temple Brotherhood Full of Activity

The Tremont Temple Brotherhood has taken on a new lease of life under the directorship of the Rev. L. W. Williamson. Once a month a plea is made for members to make choice for Christ, and usually groups of varying size respond. Last week when Dr. Massee addressed the brotherhood for the last time eight men came forward. Music is a large factor in the brotherhood, and among the activities which enlist much interest is the department of evangelism.

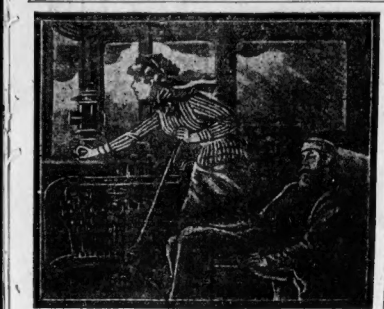
A FRIEND INDEED IS A FRIEND IN NEED



STRANGE things happen in the radio broadcasting stations—little deeds of heroism that you little realize as you sit toying with the dial. Above you see a young and pretty girl, leaping to the microphone to carry on, when Mr. McNamee, the announcer, suddenly suffered sunstroke and exhaustion from overtalking. It must have been something he ate.

Well, it breaks the ice.

The customer, had she been a good sport, would have gotten up and playfully kicked the salesman's shins. After a hearty laugh she could have asked for a discount.

Mebbe the clerk felt sorry for the customer and was merely trying to bring her to her senses.

CUT OFF KING'S HEAD IN SCHOOL

Madrid, May 25 (INS)—A sensation was caused here today by the news that 20 men and women students had committed vandalism on a statue of King Alfonso in the hall of the Central University.

Entering the building surreptitiously, the students knocked over the statue and cut off its head. It is reported they intend to send the head to the governor of Barcelona, where the king is now staying.

Meanwhile considerable agitation continues among large body of students as plans progress for re opening the universities on Monday.

SPINACH TROUBLE

Mrs. Alice Cross, 5 Mt. Vernon st., Milford, N. H., says:—"I suffered from stomach trouble for many years. I had headaches, pain in my side, appetite poor and was constipated. Local physicians were unable to relieve me. I read of Dr. Ward's and had him treat me, and now I feel fine—like a new person. I recommend Dr. Ward's to All who suffer from chronic disease."

There is beauty everywhere—
In the old and easy chair,
In the arms and in the legs,
In the faded fabric...dregs...
Dregs of beauty in that chair,
Shades of ladies with their hair
Done in netting...shoulders bare,
Cool as porcelain...a look
Like a thing from Godey's book.

We're not paid for thoughts like these,
Just a slip. Excuse it, please.

BOSTON FORUM ON TEXTILES SEPT. 19

Atlantic City, May 25—Starting September 19 Boston is to have a textile forum, the Cotton Manufacturers' National Association president, Lincoln Bayliss, announces.

Meetings for groups of employes affected by technical problems will be provided, as follows: overseers of carding, overseers of spinning, overseers of weaving, slashing and dressing master mechanics, overseers of cloth rooms, dyeing and bleaching gents, managers and superintendents.

Katrina Brooker, fashion authority in the cotton industry, urged the delegates to send cotton to Paris for styles, as shown in its proper sphere in the fashion world." She also advocated the creation of a style research bureau as a development of the present advisory boards of the associations.

Legislature Should Probe Civil Service Board

The Civil Service Commission is no longer the "Bunion Board." Humorous appellations are in good taste only so long as they are fittingly applied to humorous situations.

Humor has ceased to exist in connection with the Civil Service Commission's physical examinations for candidates for promotion in the police department.

There is nothing facetious about death.

The charge that a police sergeant died as a result of overexerting himself during such an examination should result in a complete revision of the requirements demanded of all candidates, and the Legislature may well give serious consideration to the bill providing for an investigation of the Civil Service Commission.

Public opinion was aroused several weeks ago when many patrolmen seeking to pass the physical examination required for sergeanticies were turned down because of minor physical ailments which, only by the wildest stretch of the imagination, could effect their efficiency as superior officers.

One bad tooth, a single varicose vein, slight stigmatism of one eye and failure to clear a bar in a high jump were some of the reasons reported for the individual failures.

For everyone except the candidates who failed there was a bit of humor about the tests, even though the injustice of the requirements was apparent upon the surface.

But all the laugh has gone out of them with the public charge that the death of one man and the illness of two others are directly attributable to their over-exertion in eagerness to pass the ridiculous physical examination demanded by the commission.

Why a candidate should be required to lift an object weighing 520 pounds is beyond comprehension unless the Civil Service Commission considers every policeman a potential theatrical attraction in a strong-man act. And in what manner high-jumping bears upon an officer's efficiency is likewise a mystery unless the commission has in mind pursuit of small boys or the next Olympiad.

The situation has aroused the ire of the public and incensed police officials. Now, according to the charge, it has indirectly caused a man's death and brought sorrow to at least one home.

Not alone is the efficiency of the Boston police department at stake but the morals of all our Civil Service employes is bound up in the issue.

Is it not time to hold an examination for the Civil Service Commission and allow the members of that body to demonstrate how well they can clear their own hurdles?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

New York, May 24—Many of the finest characters in a small town are those who seem to have been ennobled by chronic poverty.

I have no particular reverence for wealth, but the most considerate and agreeable people in the metropolis are frequently the very rich. They should, of course, be more tolerant and understanding. And there is nothing at all thrilling in being with the underdogs.

Yet there is something admirably sporting in making the best of it. Oddly enough, in the metropolis the grouchiest folk are often those who depend largely for their livelihood upon the gratuities bestowed by the public they serve.

I refer especially to incivilities of waiters, hat checkers, taxicab drivers and even policemen. Not once was I ever snubbed by a high salaried executive to whom I meant nothing, but innumerable times have I received discourtesy from those to whom I meant at least a tip.

As an assignment reporter, in earlier days here my door bell pull at fine mansions or my card in elaborate executive offices were never slighted, but in more humble surroundings I have had doors slammed in my face when on the most inoffensive errands. (Voice: Perhaps stealing a picture!)

I have been rudely pushed off the curb on the Bowery, but never on Park ave. The glitter of wealth in New York seems to make class consciousness more pronounced. One of the outstanding charms of the smaller city is in its lack of obeisance to riches.

In the metropolis one is always conscious of the shabby sleeve. In the one-time town it means nothing whatever and may be worn by the leading banker as well as the jobless occupant of a tin can shanty on the city dump.

A leading catch-and-leap dancer indulges such violent gymnastics in her nightly didoes she is carried to her waiting car in a state of complete exhaustion. A neat press yarn, but the sort that inspires only an editorial yawn.

Many Broadway stage and cabaret clowns have an amusing way to exploit a deep meaning in their art. Behind the mime's laugh is the broken heart and all that piffle. Any number give a conceyed hilarity to a robust evening, but their "meaning" has no more significance than a slapstick wham on the sit spot. They are a little above the average run-of-the-mill stuff and what an extraordinarily lucky break they receive so much money for it!

Capital is being raised for a new experiment in the theater—a structure fashioned after the plans of Versailles' Trianon palace, the 44 which will present only operettas of American composers. Otto Kahn, it is rumored, will pay the bill. One of these days they should put a new opera house or theater on some one else's check for a change.

Fashionable johnnies pooping over from London the new vogue feature pantaloons with a single and extraordinarily deep pleat. And the hat brim dipped way down in the back—like Mayor Walker of Palm Beach—is also good cricket.

The passing of society's movie theater—the Plaza in the Fashionable Fifties was an illustration of how tickling the ear of the rich paid. It was always crowded. The manager, with a tongue in his cheek, presented curse-you-Roger Hemingway films so buck tooth debutantes and their translucent eared boy friends could raise the players. This ballooned their feeling of smoothness and maintained a steady line at the box office.

Nothing is more annoying than the snobbery of the intelligentsia. The new rich in their striving are amusing and oftimes pathetic. But for those with only a single and feeble talent or perhaps a hope with money to spare a superiority beyond their gifts is idiotic knowwhat.

"Nob Hill," San Francisco telegraphs: "Three of your quips lately needed explanations." I just tell 'em for this price. The blueprints cost extra.

Much Ado About a Comma

It was not a question of big guns and chrome-steel fortresses that engrossed the brains at Monday's session of the grave and reverend Preparatory Disarmament Commission in Geneva. It was something of hugely more importance that evoked a soporific flood of oratory. The crux of the argument was a comma.

Chairman Politis, of Greece, brought up on Aristotle's grammar, thought a comma should be put in. Mr. Sokal, of Poland, announced his preference for an "and." Senator Massigli, of France, spoke on buttons for soldiers' leggings, and affectionately espoused the cause of the "and," Mynheer Rutgers, of Holland, came out forthright for an "or."

Two gentlemen spoke learnedly on precedence. It seems to us that the only precedence in recent years is the pleading of Sergeant Buzfuz in the celebrated case of "Bardell vs. Pickwick," who interpreted the significance of Pickwick's note on "chops and tomato sauce."

The lucubrations of the Persian, the Chinese and Japanese delegates were not cabled. Perhaps the drowsy discussion on grammar put them to sleep and they could not be roused.

That's what it was—a battle of grammarians, in which a comma transcended in importance battleships and howitzers, which the European arsenals and yards are turning out night and day.

If we must participate in this sort of conference, then we should not look for somebody of the type of a Disraeli or a Balfour. We should send over a successor to the mantle of Lindley Murray, the grammarian.

Respect for Spelling

Whatever modern educators may think of the well-nigh obsolete pastime of the spelling bee, it did give several generations of Americans a respect for the printed word. It dawns on us now and then—especially when we hear of the bad spelling prevalent in colleges—that after all this respect is a fundamental part of education.

Do we not speak of a scholar as "a man of letters?" Is it not true that a youth who masters a word like "apotheosis" or "causality" is forever after in possession of a key that might unlock a box of thought?

Two of the winners in a recent spelling sweepstakes at Washington were Teru Hayashi and Viola Strbac, both youngsters whose mother tongue was not English. They may have won because they were naturally intelligent, or because they loved words, or because they had a mechanical memory, which is by no means to be despised.

It may even prove that the ability to speak two languages makes the mind alert and retentive. Anyway, youngsters of Japanese and Czechoslovak ancestry strayed into the wilderness of English spelling and won over their rivals of British ancestry.

It is what people can do with words that really counts. Kipling admits he has to look into the dictionary once in awhile, and Stevenson never could spell "hemorrhage" correctly.

Serviss Tells of Earth's Gravity

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"May I ask you to answer three questions in one of your interesting articles?

(1) Does the acceleration of a falling body increase or decrease within the earth?

(2) What is the acceleration one thousand miles below the surface of the earth?

(3) As it cannot be measured, how is it figured out?

(4) What is the greatest terrestrial acceleration of a falling body?

(5) Does the weight increase uniformly with the acceleration?

—F. AIERLY, New York.

By the acceleration of a falling body is meant the speed which the earth's force of gravity imparts to the body in each unit of time, during which the fall continues. It is convenient to choose for the unit of time one second; the acceleration can then be measured in feet.

Experiment shows that the acceleration thus measured amounts to a little over 32 feet per second. This 32 feet per second is called the acceleration of gravity, and it is universally represented by the letter "g." It shows the increment of speed that a falling body acquires during each successive second of its fall.

It does not vary with the weight of the body, for if you take away air resistance, a feather falls just as fast as a cannon ball.

Inside the earth the acceleration increases for a time, and afterward decreases until at the center of gravity it vanishes altogether.

If the earth were a perfectly homogeneous sphere the acceleration of gravity within it would vary directly with the distance from the center, and everywhere inside would be less than on the surface, because on the surface the whole of the mass of the globe is effective in producing acceleration, while beneath the surface a shell of the globe equal in thickness to the depth of the point of observation would be subtracted from the mass producing the acceleration.

But the earth is neither homogeneous nor a perfect sphere, being much denser at the center than near the surface, while at the same time its density is not perfectly uniform in any part. In consequence the problem of calculating the acceleration at any given depth in the earth becomes a complicated one, for which only an approximate solution can be found.

Laplace, the famous mathematician and astronomer, worked out a formula for such calculation which seemed to him the most probable, and it has generally been employed with such variations as further knowledge has suggested. According to a calculation made by Prof. R. S. Woodward, on the basis of Laplace's formula, the acceleration at a depth of 1000 miles would be about 1-40th greater than at the surface. Below 1200 or 1300 miles it may be about the same as at the surface, but deeper than that it rapidly decreases to zero.

The acceleration observed at the equator is 32.088 feet or 977.99 centimeters per second. When the effect of centrifugal force at the equator is allowed for it appears that if the earth did not rotate the value of "g" at the equator would be 981.4 centimeters.

At the poles there is no trifugal force opposing gravity, and the value of "g" there is a general maximum, calculated at 983.21 centimeters. The U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey at Washington has records of many measurements of the value of "g" in different places, which will upon request send you information about them.

While all bodies fall with the same acceleration regardless of their weight, yet the force that gravity exerts upon a falling body is measured by the product of the mass of the body multiplied by the acceleration.

Take the feather and the cannon ball, both falling with the same acceleration, i. e., at the same velocity. If you received them on your hand, the feather would cause little impression, the cannon ball would crush the bones.

The "Baer" Facts -:- By Bugs Baer

The Graf Zeppelin has turned back to its blimp nursery after the captain had wasted a day looking for a narrow place to sneak across the Atlantic.

The mermaids who are supposed to lure sailors to their destruction would certainly be wasting their talents trying to charm a chimpanzee's second cousin out of a blimp.

We were hoping that the quota of pianos had been exhausted.

The reception ladled out to the gorilla upon arrival in America would have been doubtful. He ain't a Nordic.

And he could never have expected to get the keys to the city of Dayton, Tenn.

Nobody has explained yet just why the social life of America should have been enriched by the acquisition of a gorilla and a piano.

What happens when a gorilla flies the Atlantic? Do they make confetti on him in Wall st.? And who has the precedence on City Hall steps?

The gorilla is fortunate that he had enough sense to ask the captain to turn back. Lindbergh hasn't had a moment's peace since he pulled his famous flight.

And the price of glory in New York means that tabloid photographers love you alive with flashlight powders.

The Graf Zeppelin will try again next week. We hope the captain leaves either the gorilla or the piano home in Germany.

If he brings them both it means the peace conference is a fake.

Well, it might have been worse. It might have been a full orchestra.

—So far as ease of mind and contentment of statistics is concerned, we can think of better picnics and happier gymnastics than being six miles above The Gulf Stream trying to keep a gorilla out of the engine room.

The reports state that the Zeppo turned back with two broken motors. The next time they start out they should take that monkey wrench away from that Ape.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

I'M GOING to let Mary Jane say it today.

Mary Jane has ideas on Women Bosses and as she speaks from the front line trenches, they're red hot. As Women Bosses are probably a live topic in your own home, you'd better listen in. Is it a "real letter"? It is.

DEAR MISS ROBINSON:

I'd like to add a few remarks to your comment on the subject of Women Bosses. Perhaps some people prefer them, but I avoid them like I would the measles, tarantulas and rattlesnakes. Believe me, I've learned from experience.

I started to work right after I left high school, in a place which employs many women. Had a good job, worked hard and conscientiously for four years and got substantial raises. We were all like one big family. We had picnics, lunches and parties together. Everyone was happy and—what was a real test—production was high.

Then the powers above decided to change things, and they installed women bosses—and the trouble began. The men were given different jobs—the women received cheaper. It was the beginning of the end. Feuds, snobbishness and sneering abounded. The general happy trusting attitude turned into distrust, spying and snobbishness. The old bunch broke up—I was the last one to leave.

I have had two lady bosses since then, without any material difference as to treatment and ultimate results. My present job I took with the distinct understanding that I would leave at once if given a lady boss. I've been here now three years and got a good raise last Christmas.

Now, I don't intend to propose a law to abolish women bosses, but I for one will not work for them and I pity anyone who must. It's hard to explain just wherein they differ from men, but they do in countless ways.

And there is another thing which you rarely hear mentioned, but which makes a tremendous difference to women workers anywhere, whether in an office or a home, and that is—THE SNOBBISHNESS OF WOMEN IN AUTHORITY. Women are infinitely more snobbish than men. A very little authority will go to their heads and they like to take it out on the women under them. When you're through at night the men bosses will walk with you as far as the corner and say a cheerful good-bye. PUT THE WOMEN WILL STAND AROUND SO THEY WON'T HAVE TO TAKE THE SAME STREET CAR.

And I haven't told you the half yet! But I can sum it all up with this—I WOULD RATHER BE BOSSED BY A MAN'S "DAMN" ANY DAY THAN BY A WOMAN'S "GOSH. There's more honesty behind it, more fair play. And, knowing these weaknesses of my sex, I shall avoid BEING a woman boss as carefully as I shall avoid working for one. Bye! MARY JANE.

Thumbs down for W. B'S—that's Mary Jane's decision.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

NOW comes the ideal moment in which to choose your partner in the marriage-game, against nature's background, far from the madding rose-colored lights.

Summer has been called the season of romance; but more romances are wrecked by the revelations of the cruel sunlight on the beach than are born of the magic moonlight on the piazza.

Most of the year a man and a girl see other under the kindly glow of pink-shaded candles and the softening shadow of turned down lamps. But this is the unrelenting hour, in which they can get a good, clear close-up of each other, by natural daylight.

It is the melting season, when powder turns to paste, marcels wilt in the dew, and illusions and sentiment struggle for their lives against sunburn and peeling nose.

Oh, yes, the good old Summer time is the acid test of love. The time to discover whether you are still crazy to spend your lives together, after a long rainy week-end in each other's undiluted company —or just crazy ever to have thought of it!

It is the time when he can take her fishing and see how long she can keep QUIET at a stretch; or observe how she can climb a hill, bike or meet a snake on the road and how she can put up a lunch, open a tin can and bind up a cut finger. And whether she falls in with the crowd, or falls OUT with everybody and proves just a killjoy.

It is the acid-test by which he may discover whether twelve long hours spent mooning or motoring with her is a stimulant, a sedative or a supreme bore; and whether his love will stand the strain of her back-seat driving when the motor stalls or the sailboat is becalmed.

It is the chance of a girl's life to discover just how much of a "hero" her Prince Charming is when the oil stove explodes or the canoe overturns. It is her golden moment to find out just how much "help" he is around the camp, or how much he is inclined to sneak out of things; and how fussy or fastidious he is when the ants get into the butter.

It is a dangerous season, when she can discover just how far away he can be trusted with another girl under the mesmeric influence of moonlight and music. And just how his temper reacts to a cruel sun or an overturned coffee pot or a blow-out on the road.

Well, it might have been worse. It might have been a full orchestra.

Yes, it is the season when the acid test of love is applied to matrimonial engagements. If they survive it, they are safe. If they don't, they should be broken.

Capital is being raised for a new experiment in the theater—a structure fashioned after the plans of Versailles' Trianon palace, the 44 which will present only operettas of American composers. Otto Kahn, it is rumored, will pay the bill. One of these days they should put a new opera house or theater on some one else's check for a change.

Fashionable johnnies pooping over from London the new vogue feature pantaloons with a single and extraordinarily deep pleat. And the hat brim dipped way down in the back—like Mayor Walker of Palm Beach—is also good cricket.

The passing of society's movie theater—the Plaza in the Fashionable Fifties was an illustration of how tickling the ear of the rich paid. It was always crowded. The manager, with a tongue in his cheek, presented curse-you-Roger Hemingway films so buck tooth debutantes and their translucent eared boy friends could raise the players. This ballooned their feeling of smoothness and maintained a steady line at the box office.

Nothing is more annoying than the snobbery of the intelligentsia. The new rich in their striving are amusing and oftimes pathetic. But for those with only a single and feeble talent or perhaps a hope with money to spare a superiority beyond their gifts is idiotic knowwhat.

"Nob Hill," San Francisco telegraphs: "Three of your quips lately needed explanations." I just tell 'em for this price. The blueprints cost extra.
